Woman Who Bitterly Assailed Court in a Magazine Article Is Branded as an Anarchist; Hockin Placed in Jail

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 2. — The imprisonment of Herbert S. Hocken, one of the "hot" defendants, in default of an increased bond which was required by the court, because he had deceived every one, "the old woman" by the district attorney of a woman writer in the court room is an "anarchist," and a repudiation by attorneys for the defense of some of the acts of the defendants, were among sensational incidents of the sensational conspiracy trial today.

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

The court's action in increasing Hickins' bond and in demanding a return of the defendants for publishing articles in criticism of the trial came after the jury had

Judge Anderson said
I did not intend to take any notice of the articles read to the jury but since they have been referred to
I will say I never heard of such an outrageous contempt of court. If any member of the bar here present has given him sanction to that publication he is in contempt, and I that any attorney has given his sanction, the hand of the law will fall heavily on him. Certain men representing themselves to be attorneys are here and if I learn to be true certain things it is reported they have said the hand of the law will fall heavily with them.

I will increase Hockin's bond. The evidence has shown that he is a man who cannot be trusted by anybody at any time of the day. He has betrayed every person with whom he has had to deal. But as it is Saturday, I will not consider increasing the bonds of the others. Hockin will be taken into custody.

Jewell Forced to Testify.
Hockin said he was unable to furnish the bond tonight but he thought he would on Monday.
Mr. Jewell's testimony was one of the unexpected incidents of the day.

News of Local Courts

All taking of testimony in the adverse suits of Anna Lisdick vs. Ellen D. Jack, in the district court, was concluded yesterday afternoon. The case was then adjourned until 5:30 o'clock this morning. Judge Shearer asking the attorneys to prepare outlines of any instructions they might wish to request over night. It is probable that the case will go to the jury before noon today.

A jury of three, in the county court yesterday, gave judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $120 in the case of Ed Burke and Al Randolph vs. E. L. Vandruff. The suit was brought to recover on a contract for the building of a private telephone line from Woodland park to Manitou park.

Emily Bloom, formerly Emily Peterson, has filed a money demand suit in the district court against Priscilla Abraham, to recover $12.50 said to be due on a promissory note and an attorney's fee of $25 for its collection.

The Brown Commission company has filed two money demand suits in the district court to recover for goods sold. They are against L. M. Ortiz & Bro. for $35.77, and a must Bruce Willis for $65.23.

J. W. Atkinson, one of the defendants in a suit brought recently by the Colorado Title and Trust company, has filed a motion for a new trial, declaring that the district court erred in granting the trust company a motion for summary judgment. The title of the suit is The Colorado Title and Trust company vs. Schwingel and McCandlish, the Star and Crescent Building company, the Trussed Concrete Steel company, and J. W. Atkinson.

TWO GREAT NATIONS PREPARE FOR WAR; RUSSIA TALKS PEACE

Austria and Russia Strengthening Border Forces; Balkan Representatives Meet Tomorrow to Talk Peace Terms

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Interest in the war situation shifted today from the belligerents, whose delegates are preparing to meet with an apparently sincere desire to work out the terms of a truce, to the great neighboring powers, Austria and Russia. These rivals are strengthening their border forces at an hour when the statesmen of all the powers are spreading broad assurances that their only policy is to subordinate rivalries and interests to the common welfare of Europe in the cause of peace.

No threatening factor in the situation is known which has not existed since the beginning of the war, unless the near approach of the Serbian army to the Adriatic and the stepward mobilization may mean more than mutual distrust. When the crisis over Bosnia and Herzegovina in both Russia and Austria came near to a war footing, on this point it is now said that a cloud drifted away.

Russia Mobilizes Troops.

U. S. GRAND JURY IF GUILTY, WE SHOULD PAY PENALTY

STATE CORPORATIONS ARE INDICTED

Finishes Inquiry at Pueblo and Returns Report Many Arrested

PUEBLO, Nov. 23.—Not even the federal grand jury could escape the influence of the day which has been sitting in this city for the past week. The report of the grand jury in 86 indictments against the federal grand jury took place in the city of Pueblo, Colorado, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado.

While Little Could Be Learned as to what the jury actually meant by this indictment, it is understood that the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado.

The indictment is a call for the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado.

There were indictments returned against a large number of persons throughout the state, the names of whom were not made public pending the service. Some of those indicted are already in jail, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado, and the grand jury is now in the city of Pueblo, Colorado.

The Denver and El Paso grand juries and the Colorado and Santa Fe grand juries are indicted with several counts against each mostly in the grounds of grand jury favors while shipping alleged to have benefited by these grand juries are also indicted.

PHILADELPHIA Nov. 23.—Officers of the national American Woman Suffrage association can take part in partisan politics in any state if they want to.

After a long and spirited debate at today's session of the organization's convention an amendment prohibiting such participation was overwhelmingly defeated.

Up to the time Miss Jane Addams secured the nomination of Col. Theodore Roosevelt for 1912 to pay mothers for taking care of their own children and employment of at least one additional probation officer or investigator under this law at an expense of not less than $50 a year will be asked from the county commissioners tomorrow, as the result of a conference yesterday with Judge John E. Little of the juvenile court and representatives of the Women's club.

The mothers' compensation law is an amendment to the act concerning dependent and neglected children. Under the law as it now stands the juvenile court has but one alternative in prosecution to take children away from parents because they are neglected or dependent, and that is to send them to the State Home for Dependent and Neglected Children.

A new method is provided by the mothers' compensation act, which provides that if parents are poor and unable to care for their children, but otherwise are proper guardians, and it is for the welfare of the child to remain at home, the court may enter an order requiring such aid, and fix the amount.

W. P. LARRABEE APPOINTED COUNTY ROAD OVERSEER

W. P. Larrabee was yesterday appointed road overseer for El Paso county by W. T. Kennedy, one of the newly elected county commissioners. Larrabee will resume the duties of the new office early in January.

Larrabee has had two years' experience in practical road building in Wyoming and his friends predict that he will make good in that capacity here. He is well known in official circles as a deputy in the sheriff's office under Gilbert and Grimes and later a constable in Justice Ruby's court. Kennedy's note of appointment said that Larrabee would be road overseer during his full term of office.

amount necessary to enable the parents to care for such children. County Judge-elect W. P. Hines, in the conference report to the commissioners, states that no case will be given relief under the new law without the most thorough investigation, and with the help of the organizations cooperating with the juvenile work in El Paso county.

This new law is taken from the Illinois pension act, which uses the word "parents," meaning, of course, being included in parents. The purpose of drafting the law in this form was to avoid an attack upon it because of class legislation, if it should be limited to mothers alone. In actual practice, however, it is practically limited to mothers because fathers are liable, under the law, to support their children, unless they are incapacitated.

Will Assist Mothers Only.

It is not probable that anyone but the mother, who is paid to stay at home to take care of her own children, will receive assistance from the court. It has been demonstrated in Illinois, under this act, that it costs about one-half as much to keep the children at home with their mothers as it costs to keep them in state institutions.

The law has been in effect there for two years and seems to have the support of the people of the state. The amount expended in Chicago during the first year was $75,000. The amount asked for the city and county of Denver for 1912 is $8,700.

ever uttered in "your beautiful language." Leaning toward Mr. Atwill, Giovanni said in a trembling voice:

"So, solemn is this moment, so full with clashing emotions am I now, that I do not know whether I ever will conclude what I have to say."

Then he straightened up, in the cage and for 20 minutes spoke as he in the crisis of passion. He did not discuss the evidence but what he called "the preposterousness of the idea" that such a man and his comrades could have been guilty of a murderous thought.

"Whirling around with a violent gesture."

"If there is a man in the court room who has murder in his heart, he is not in this cage."

There was a hush over the court room as Giovanni sat down. Not a man nor woman moved for several tense moments. Then Judge Quinn, apologizing to the jurors, announced that he would be compelled to hold them further as he would not deliver his charge in the case until Monday morning.

The prisoners were driven back to the jail through streets lined with their friends and followers who cheered them loudly as they passed.

mobile, and a little later it was decided to move the body, which was still 250 feet above the road, down into the canon.

Because of the steepness of the slide, the only way possible to do this was for one of the party to hold the body in his arms and then sit down and slide along the rock. Five of them took turns in the dangerous work, each one making about 20 feet at a time. Three of the other four would group themselves directly in front, in order to prevent the man with the body going too fast, and the fifth would follow closely behind to give assistance.

The body finally was brought to the road in that manner, and Coroner Jackson took charge of it and brought it to the city. State Superior and Sister Beane had remained near the scene of the accident during this time, and four others from the academy went out with the coroner. The body is being held at the undertaking rooms of Fairley & Law.

The girl's father, John T. Sheehan, is dead. Her mother, Mrs. Ella Sheehan, 712 North Spruce street, is a teacher at the Curtis school. Mildred was the youngest of four children. She had been a student at the Loreto academy for several years, and was a general favorite with her teachers.

CONTROL TUBERCULOSIS, LESSEN CRIME, SAYS JUDGE

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 23.—If tuberculosis were controlled, the expenditures of the state for the control of crime would be largely reduced.

George W. Ray, United States district judge, thus summarized his experience on the bench with 26 persons who had become criminals because they had been bereft of parental guidance by tuberculosis or who, wasted by disease, had taken to counterfeiting or some other light work of an illegal nature in order to provide themselves with shelter.

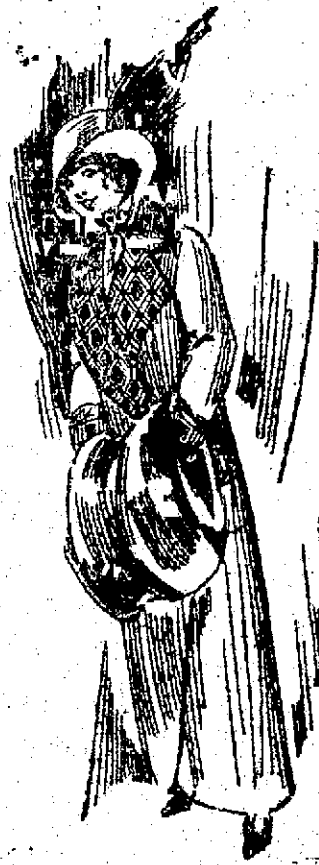

The establishment of tuberculosis hospitals, Judge Ray urged, as a measure of economy, stating that one of the 30 cases he described had alone cost the state over $200,000.

HENRY IS RELEASED AND WILL START LIFE ANEW

DENVER, Nov. 23.—For embezzlement, larceny as bailee and grand larceny, Theodore C. Henry, confined in west side criminal court here today, will not be punished. William Stapleton, manager of the Denver Republican during the period Henry, as a bookkeeper, admitted he embezzled approximately $10,000, asked on behalf of the newspaper and Henry, recommended that sentence be suspended and Judge Teller complied.

Henry told the court no one but himself had benefited by his thefts, said he had made full reparation and would leave the state and start anew. Henry was arrested September 23, 1911.

WILSON'S COUSIN WILL BECOME RAILROAD LAWYER

DENVER, Nov. 23.—Thomas R. Woodrow, cousin of President-elect Wilson, and assistant city attorney of Denver for five years, will on December 1 become assistant general solicitor of the Chicago, Burlington & Quil railroad and also for the Colorado & Southern railroad. Mr. Woodrow gave out the announcement here tonight. He will be located in Denver.

STOMACH BAD? BELCHING GAS AND SOUR FOOD? WANT TO FEEL FINE?

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt, if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps, your head dizzy and aches, belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Diapepsin and in five minutes you truly will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

JUDGE R. M. CLARK IS SENT TO SANATORIUM

Newspaper clippings and letters have been received here telling of the mental collapse of Judge R. M. Clark of Dallas, Tex., who was well known here because of his frequent visits to the Pikes Peak region. Judge Clark is a brother of Mrs. C. J. Heaven of 22 North Limite street. His breakdown is attributed to overwork, both as prosecuting attorney in Dallas and as county attorney of Dallas county, and he has been removed to a sanatorium.

Judge Clark is 50 years old, and was for many years prosecuting attorney in Dallas. He was one of the hardest of workers, spending day and night on his cases. He kept up this habit after becoming county attorney of Dallas county, refusing to take a vacation until absolutely forced by his health to do so. This failed to help him, and his recent breakdown followed. Mrs. Heaven was preparing to visit him just before this occurred.

Mrs. Heaven and Judge Clark are the children of the Rev. John A. Clark, a pioneer Missouri minister.

SECRET SERVICE AGENTS INVESTIGATING J. J. COHAN

Secret service agents are investigating the alleged threat that John J. Cohan, who is held in the county jail, is accused of making threats against the life of President-elect Woodrow Wilson, according to information given out yesterday.

Evidence that Cohan made the threat was given to federal secret service department Thursday, and an investigation by the government, it is said, was instituted immediately. Since Cohan was arrested and held for investigation by secret service agents in New Orleans, during a visit of President Taft, and again in Chicago, while Roosevelt was there, he has been under suspicion of the department.

In both cities, it is said, Cohan forced his way through the crowds, attempting to break into the immediate presence of Taft and Roosevelt. Although there was no charge after investigation upon which Cohan could be held by the government, it is said that he has been under constant surveillance.

Detective Railroad conducted the investigation that disclosed evidence that Cohan had made threats against the life of President-elect Wilson. Cohan denies that he ever threatened to kill Woodrow Wilson.

MURDER OF DANCER Baffles Officers

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The murder of a dancer named Juliette Souavin, in the Bois de Boulogne, is at present occupying the attention of the Sherlock Holmes of the detective force. The woman was walking in the wood with two friends, but left her companions and went on alone. She did not return and a search was made for her. Shortly afterwards a man was found engaged in the occupation of digging a hole. By his side lay the dead body of the dancer. On being discovered, the man jumped on a bicycle and rode off. As yet there is no trace of him. The body was seen by M. Guichard, chief of the detective force, and M. Bertillon, the director of the anthropometric service, and other magistrates made a careful examination of the spot, several photographs were taken.

On the ground a cigar cutter in the form of a pistol and a half-smoked cigar and a franc piece were found. A man's handkerchief tied around the woman's neck bore the letter C. The murderer had not taken the rings or the earrings from his victim. An important statement was made by a woman who is a regular frequenter of the Bois de Boulogne. She gave a description of the man whom she saw following Juliette Souavin.

The crime has attracted more than ordinary attention by reason of the fact that the murderer had attempted to dig a grave for the victim. The body has been removed for a post-mortem examination.

Can Make Own Living, President Taft Will Not Accept Carnegie Pension

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—President Taft has no intention of accepting the Andrew Carnegie pension for ex-presidents. While the president refused to discuss the matter for publication, it is known that he does not care to become a pensioner of the plan, having already made all preparations for the establishment of a good law practice which he expects will bring him in sufficient money for the support of himself and family.

The general belief among those well informed in Washington is that Carnegie's plan was designed mainly to bring sharply to the attention of the public the neglect of the United States government in the matter of pensions for ex-presidents.

Taft, it is known, proposes to be one of the latest presidents who ever left the executive office. He has no doubt about his ability to make a good living for himself and family in the practice of law. It is predicted that he will be offered the cream of the law business of this country, and can make $200,000 a year at the work.

He will take dignity with him in his retirement, but it will not be the sort of dignity that will prevent his hustling for a living or cause him to cease to mingle with his fellow citizens.

The president recently broadly hinted that the United States government should provide for ex-presidents so that they need not lower the dignity of the position they held when they entered into private life.

GEORGE HILTZ, PIONEER OF CLEAR CREEK COUNTY, DIES

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases that we are glad to make our remedy public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in Dr. D. D. Prescription, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we consider this the only one that we can recommend. It is a sure cure for all cases of Eczema, and it is a sure cure for all cases of Eczema. It is a sure cure for all cases of Eczema.

Drop into our store today just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription. Robinson Drug Co. Adv.

Death and Funerals

FUNERAL OF E. G. PERKINS WILL BE HELD TOMORROW

The funeral of E. G. Perkins, father of Dr. Phil H. Perkins, will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in St. Mary's church. Interment in Evergreen cemetery will be private.

Mr. Perkins died Friday night in a local hospital. He had lived in Colorado Springs for 34 years and served four terms as county assessor and one term as coroner. He was born in Joliet, Ill., in 1838. In 1884 he crossed the plains and Rocky mountains to California, where he resided for some time. On that trip he endured many privations. With the party of five he suffered greatly for water while in western Kansas, and with two others was sent out to explore for rivers or springs. Before they reached water, Mr. Perkins was completely exhausted with fatigue and thirst, and he was compelled to crawl for a long distance on his knees. Mr. Perkins commanded wide respect for his integrity and his genial disposition.

The Infant son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Capen died Friday evening at a local hospital.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Toohy was held yesterday morning at St. Mary's church, where requiem high mass was celebrated. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery. Mrs. Toohy was born in Nenagh county, Tipperary, Ireland. She is survived by a brother, Roddy Cawley of Philadelphia; one son, Michael Toohy; her daughter, Mrs. Kennedy, and five grandchildren. Mrs. Kennedy is the wife of J. J. Kennedy, roadmaster of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad.

DISMISS INDICTMENTS AGAINST DENVER MEN

DENVER, Nov. 23.—Indictments brought by a special grand jury against 50 present and past Denver city and county officials and property owners in September last, charging them and property owners with allowing various institutions of vice to exist, were dismissed by Judge James H. Teller in the criminal branch of the district court this morning.

Judge Teller held that District Judge H. L. Shattuck, who presided in the criminal branch of the district court at the time the indictments were returned and who set aside District Attorney Elliott and appointed as special prosecutor, John Horn Chiles, had no legal right to appoint a special prosecutor, and that therefore, the indictments were illegal.

CONTEST IS OUTCOME ELECTION IN CONEJOS

CONEJOS, Colo., Nov. 23.—District Judge Holbrook has issued a writ of mandamus ordering the county canvassing board to reconvene and grant a certificate of election to John Macon of Romeo as county clerk, and recorder. Macon claimed to have been elected on the face of the returns but was counted out by four votes by the canvassing board, consisting of his opponent, Walter D. Carroll, incumbent, and two justices of the peace.

The board issued a certificate to Carroll on the strength of written statements of election judges changing the official returns, which gave Macon a majority of 11. These statements were held by the judge to be inadequate to vary the official returns, as they went farther than the mere correction of clerical errors.

The campaign in this county was one of the most hotly contested in its annals. It has resulted in the partial overthrow of the present Democratic administration, which has been in practically undisputed power for 25 years by the Republican party, the Bull Moosers joining in the struggle and getting two county commissioners, county clerk, county judge, district attorney, district judge and assessor.

The campaign locally hinged on the refusal of the county clerk to allow Ira C. Green, a lawyer of Alamosa, representing a number of heavy taxpayers, to examine the books of the county commissioners to ascertain if the fees taken by the clerk and recorder were not sufficient to defray the expenses of running the county offices, instead of paying them in large measure from the general fund.

Green got an order from the district court petitioning him to allow Ira C. Green to examine the books. It is so difficult for Green that he was held in contempt by the court, which then appointed a committee of auditors to go through the records for the last two years and work was begun a few weeks before election, when Green claims, the auditors, after a seven hours' examination, discovered a shortage of $2,500 in the books of the county clerk.

A petition is being circulated among heavy taxpayers subscribing funds against any efforts to contest the election. The signers pledge themselves to force the repayment of all moneys they claim have been unlawfully taken out of the general fund and which, in the last six years alone, they claim, will aggregate $50,000.

Two American Soldiers Capture Mexican Town

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 23.—Corporal McHugh, troop C, Thirteenth cavalry, commanding an army composed of Private Colwick, invaded Mexico from Fabens, Texas, and took the town of San Ygnacio. As a result the two United States soldiers repose today in the Juarez jail charged with a serious criminal offense.

Entering Mexico, mounted and armed to seek "Tequila," a fiery Mexican liquor, they engaged in a fight in a peaceful Mexican town and three natives testify that they were beaten over the heads with the troopers' pistols. One of the men may die. The American troopers finally were overpowered by a swarm of Mexican rurales.

London once had a Six o'clock club which consisted of six members (one who met at 6 o'clock in the evening and separated at 6 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Brooks and the celebrated Greek scholar Person were members of this club.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW
MAY BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL

According to a special committee of the House of Representatives, the new eight-hour law for women in all probable unconstitutional, as it is classed as a law that may be regarded, turned, consulted by the committee as it does not apply to women in offices in the capacity of typists and cashiers. The committee also may be unconstitutional, merchants are planning to fight it. The greater number of large firms favor the eight-hour law, it is believed, may be without much inconvenience.

Avery Doesn't Favor Amending Charter

Mayor Avery doesn't favor an amendment to the charter as proposed by E. H. Rollins & Sons, bond brokers of Denver, that the city may refund its water bonds at five per cent, holding that it would be possible to sell 4 1/2 per cent refunding bonds at par. He will refer the proposition to the Chamber of Commerce at a conference tomorrow afternoon.

Mayor Avery states that attorneys have contended that under the state statutes the city cannot refund bonds when optional, but only when due and past due, and none will be due until November 1, 1914. He refers to an opinion from Judge Dillon of New York that, while it might be legal to refund the bonds without a vote of the people, such authorization should be secured, as bond houses would not otherwise invest in them.

"It was to get around the state law requiring that bonds be due before being refunded that the home rule amendment voted on November 5 was of such importance to this city," he says, "and if that law carried it is the opinion of the city attorney and other local attorneys that we can proceed to refund the bonds now optional."

Mayor Avery does not believe it necessary or advisable to authorize the payment of a per cent interest, as he is of the opinion that these bonds can be sold for 4 1/2 and that it might be the best plan to pay a slight discount and dispose of them without exceeding the 5 per cent limit imposed by the charter.

MASONIC DANCES WILL BEGIN NEXT WEDNESDAY

Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of committees of which will have in charge a series of invitation dances to be given at Masonic temple. The first dance will take place next Wednesday evening, to be followed by dances December 17, January 23, February 13 and March 21. Fink's orchestra will furnish the music. BRYANT TURNER BUILDING HOME IN BROADMOOR

Two handsome residences costing $80,000 are to be completed this winter at Broadmoor. One by Bryant Turner, a wealthy Denver clubman and the other by S. L. Shover, a millionaire broker of Philadelphia. Mr. Shover has started the construction of his home as was announced some time ago in The Gazette and plans are being completed by Architect Bischof of Denver for Mr. Turner's home, which will face the lake. Mr. Turner is well known here, and is a brother of Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley of Broadmoor. Mr. and Mrs. Shover have lived at Broadmoor for the last year and their children have attended the Exing school, which it is said, has attracted the Turners to remove to that section.

Both of the residences are to be of the most modern design, will be constructed to compare favorably with the other handsome homes in the Broadmoor section.

SKINNER SLATED FOR SEVERAL APPOINTMENTS

In addition to the various other offices that Mark Skinner is said to be slated for, his friends in Democratic circles are now talking about securing the appointment of dairy commissioner before he receives any government appointment. Skinner is said to be a leading candidate for the postmaster's position but that office is not open until January, 1914, the dairy job is being scheduled.

He is also on the list for internal collector of revenue for the state. This is a better position than the postmaster's, and the collector has 15 deputies in the state.

William Jones and W. E. Doyle are said to be other applicants for the postmaster'ship.

CAST IS COMPLETED FOR BIG MOCK TRIAL

The cast is now complete for the mock trial on the "what became of Jennie Brice," which is to be given next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock under the auspices of the Woman's club in the club rooms at the I. O. O. F. temple. This trial, which will be open to the public, concerns the disappearance of Jennie Brice, the heroine of an exciting and baffling mystery story now running in Everybody's. It will be conducted in exact imitation of a real trial. Robert Kerr will preside as judge, Martin Burns will act as the prosecuting attorney and James A. Orr will be the attorney for the defense.

Other prominent people who will take part in the trial are: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. R. Stote, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce Wolf, Dr. and Mrs. George A. Boyd, Mr. E. W. Davis, Mr. A. P. Martin, Mr. C. M. And, Mrs. J. Allard Jeancon, Mr. A. F. Rose, Mr. R. A. Chadwick, Jr., Mrs. Myrtle Morrison and Mrs. A. B. Williams.

There is no trial by jury in the Netherlands.

News of Local Courts

SUPERSEDEAS GRANTED IN ENGLE DAMAGE SUIT

The supreme court has granted the application of the Colorado Springs & Interurban Company for a writ of superseadeas in the suit of J. B. Engle against the company. A writ in the district court yesterday gave Mrs. Engle judgment for $8,500 for personal injuries. She was run over by an electric trolley and her foot was cut off at the ankle. In the trial was alleged as grounds for the superseadeas.

A writ of superseadeas was granted by J. W. Atkinson, a defendant in a suit against the Colorado Springs & Interurban Company. He declares that the writ served in granting the trust company a mechanic's lien. The title of the suit is the Colorado Title & Trust company vs. the Star & Truett Company Steel company and J. W. Atkinson.

Fourteen drivers of automobiles and motorcycles charged with violation of ordinances on speed and licenses, appeared in police court yesterday morning.

On a charge of nonsupport preferred in Denver Ed Freeman, colored, was arrested Thursday in Roswell.

P. Waldron was fined $10 in police court yesterday for begging. He was committed to jail in default of payment.

Bert Whitaker was fined $20 in police court yesterday on a charge of disturbing the peace. He was accused of striking J. Colglazier over the head.

A money demand suit has been filed in the district court by Emily Brown against Priscilla Abraham to recover $1270, said to be due on a promissory note, and an attorney's fee of $333.33 collection.

A controversy between James P. Bussey and J. W. Smythe over ownership of a valuable Scotch collie was settled in favor of Smythe yesterday in Justice Dunnigan's court. Smythe claimed that the dog was a present from a friend to his children while Smythe stated that he bought it from a milkman.

A DAINTY TOILET ARTICLE

Every lady who desires to keep up her attractive appearance, while at theatre, attending receptions, when shopping, while traveling and on all occasions should carry in her purse a booklet of Goursaud's Oriental Beauty Leaves. This is a dainty little booklet of exquisitely perfumed powdered leaves which are easily removed and applied to the skin. It is invaluable when the face becomes moist and flushed and is far superior to a powder puff as it does not spill and soil the clothes.

It removes dirt, soot and grease from the face imparting a cool delicate bloom to the complexion. Put up in White and Pink and sent anywhere on receipt of ten cents in stamp or coin. F. T. Hopkins, 37 Great Jones St., New York.

ELKTON COMPANY PAYS ITS QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

Checks for a quarterly dividend of two cents a share were received yesterday by stockholders of the Elkton Consolidated Mining & Milling Co. Officials of the company state that this dividend has been more than earned by the company during the last quarter. The shaft is being sunk as rapidly as water conditions will permit, and the water is steadily declining below the eleventh level from which the production is now being made. The Raven and Beacon Hill shaft reached the required depth in November to connect with the upraise, and shipments of ore are now being made from this territory with good indications for the future. The next dividend will be due in February.

LOCAL MERCHANTS GET VALUABLE INFORMATION

The Credit Reporting company of this city has taken another step toward perfecting its service. When the company started business it adopted the slogan "Better Mercantile Agency Service" and at all times has made good its promise to clients by giving the best service possible. There is now in the hands of the printer, copy for a new edition to their Merchants Credit Guide, which will contain a complete abstract of the real estate and personal assessments of every individual residing in El Paso county. The guide will be arranged in loose leaf form so that new pages may be added from time to time. In the near future every merchant in the city will have this feature added to the present guide, and it will place in the hands of business men valuable information that will enable them to determine what real estate and personal property an applicant for credit possesses. The Merchants Credit Guide is the only credit reference book published here since May, 1916, and is regarded as standard authority.

JUST NOW

Eastern Colorado farmers want to buy young stock to eat up their big crops and make them big money. They need loans of from one to five hundred dollars. They have good security and are willing to pay good interest.

If you have a few hundred dollars put it on an earning basis and at the same time help honest farmers to help themselves.

New York's Budget Biggest in World

City's Expenses for 1913 Will Be Nearly $200,000,000. Exceeds Combined Expenses of Six European Countries. Item for Education Greater Than Pay of Army—Exports Say $1,200 a Year Minimum, on Which Average Family Can Live Here Decently—Consumers Rejoice Over Decrease in Price of Big Food Staple—City May Have Doll Quarantine—New York Theaters Would Boast Popularity of St. Paul or Providence.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21. The largest budget which has ever been adopted by any city in the world has been passed by the board of estimate here, but New Yorkers are so used to big financial doings of all sorts that the act has caused little comment save for some more or less subdued grumbling at the increased expenditure. As a matter of fact the budget estimate of more than $193,000,000 for the city's expenses of 1913 is with an exception larger than that of any other government, municipal, state or national, in the western hemisphere. The exception of course is the United States itself. Some idea of what such a budget really amounts to may be gathered from the fact that it is as large as those of Denmark, Switzerland, Sweden, Norway, Greece and Serbia combined. New York maintains no army, and the appropriation for schools for next year would keep up a very respectable military establishment. In fact the school money about equals the yearly pay of the whole United States army at the present time for both officers and enlisted men. More than $36,700,000 is set aside for the educational needs of the city, which supports, besides the elementary schools and the great high school system, a normal college and the College of the City of New York where any young New Yorker, boy or girl, may get a modern college education free of tuition. The police department will cost $16,500,000 next year, the fire department $8,900,000, public charities $3,600,000, and so it goes. New Yorkers find some comfort in the fact that the tax rate is not going up with the growing budget. The increase of $11,000,000 over the 1912 forecast is met in part by an increased assessment of $130,000,000 on the taxable real estate, and a direct improvement in the returns from certain properties of the city which pay revenue, notably the great city docks, which under efficient management will bring in a total of $9,500,000 more than they have this year.

WHAT IT COSTS TO LIVE

Twelve hundred dollars a year is the sum fixed upon by investigators as the lowest upon which an average family can live on a "comfortable American plane" in New York, and families thinking of migrating to this city are invited to ponder on this figure before moving. Of course a family can exist here on less, but in making the investigation "rye bread and sausage" wages have not been considered but a figure sought which will provide a family of five with the necessities of life though not with the luxuries, and allow them to live in comfort. While one hundred dollars a month is the sum which is held necessary to accomplish this end in this city, it is admitted that in other parts of the country as much could be obtained from sixty to seventy dollars. An income of $900 for a family of five, the investigators conclude, will provide only the minimum of nourishment and comfort and will not meet any extra demands such as might arise from sickness or other causes. The tabulation of the various items of expense which absorb such an income, averaged from a large number of families per month, shows the following figures: Rent, $15.88; food, $20.90; fuel, $2.76; light, $1.47; clothing, $10.43; car fare, $2.51; lunches, $3.82; dues, 57 cents; insurance, $1.61; incidentals, $3.95; total, $72.90. Upon this basis a family of five must spend $874.80 a year and must earn on an average of $10.82 a week. As compared to the New York working man, those of Holland and France live much more comfortably while the average German "plane of living" is so much higher as to make any comparison valueless. What the investigators regard as one of the most serious phases of this situation is found in their statement that workers in tall office buildings, such as elevator men, porters, hall men and the like are likely to become a race of bachelors, since the cost of marrying and supporting a family is far beyond their means.

PRICE OF SUGAR DOWN

While it may not exercise any marked effect on the high cost of living, the price of one at least of the necessities of life bids fair to show a very marked decrease during the coming year. This commodity is sugar, the price of which has been above what has come to be regarded as its normal level for nearly a year and a half. Experts who keep in touch with sugar production in all parts of the world point to the decline in wholesale prices that has already set in as merely a forerunner of greater reductions which they believe are to follow. Two causes are given as conducing to lower rates for sugar. One of these is the exceptionally heavy output of the great sugar-producing countries of Europe and the tropics. The other is the rapid growth of the beet sugar industry in the United States which promises to produce a billion and a half pounds of sugar this season, or an increase of more than 25 per cent over the best previous record. While this is only about one-fifth of the entire consumption of the country, its effect upon prices is so well recognized that wholesalers regularly count upon a reduction in prices every season as soon as the beet sugar made in American factories comes upon the market. It was this factor last season that broke the corner in sugar and brought prices down from the dizzying wholesale level of 7 1/2 cents a pound to the point at which it has remained since. In fact one of the annoying things about the domestic production of sugar in the United States from the point of view of the refiners and speculators is that it prevents the advancement of prices through combination. Curiously enough the one article of general use that shows a marked decline in cost happens also to be almost the only one that has grown cheaper within the past decade.

CURIOUS QUARANTINES

The idea of quarantine, which has done so much to prevent the spread of all sorts of troubles, is getting some queer applications hereabouts just at present. A quarantine on potatoes is now in effect at New York, and it seems likely that the entire cargo of a ship which has just arrived from Germany with $15,000 worth of potatoes will be seized by the government. The United States has officially laid a ban on potatoes from the British Isles, Germany, Austria, Newfoundland and the French islands of Miquelon and St. Pierre, because of certain potato diseases which are prevalent in those countries. At the same time, it is not unlikely that a doll quarantine will be established to prevent the spread of tuberculosis not among the doll population—but among their flesh and blood foster mothers. A child labor investigator tells of hearing a woman who has just bought a doll in one of the fashionable Fifth avenue toy shops remark to the salesman, "My little girl will take it to bed with her tonight." Two days before, the inspector had seen the same doll "sweat" together in a crowded tenement room where two members of the family who were working on it were affected with tuberculosis. It has been proposed to seize all dolls made in such places and hold them in quarantine until a law can be passed prohibiting home work in tenements entirely.

THE GREATEST AMUSEMENT RESORT IN THE WORLD

Twenty new theaters were built or began in New York in 1912, and the town was already oversupplied, according to the theatrical men. Where it will stop nobody knows, but by the time the new houses are open for business the theaters of this city will be able to seat all the citizens of St. Paul or Providence, if they should come to town in a body for a theater party. Seven of the new houses alone will seat 17,500 people, and none of these is located in the great "white light" district where the city's night life centers. Nine others, however, are being finished in the streets close around Long-acre Square and they will all be "Broadway Houses" in the sense in which theaterdom uses the word. Theaterdom is distinctly illogical in using that word, by the way, for two-thirds of the recognized "big Broadway Houses" are not in Broadway, and there are a dozen or more large theaters fronting the great "main street" of New York which yet do not have the prestige of great new productions and distinguished actors. Some of the new theaters will be weeded out after a season or two, but it is likely that most of them will stay. The metropolis is more of an amusement resort than most people realize, and that it is the greatest in the world has never been any secret.

IN THE WORLD OF SCIENCE

Valuation of Babies at $4,000 Apiece, on Average, Calls Forth Vigorous Protest From Medical Paper

On the New York Evening Post, this reduction of everything to a common denominator of dollars and cents is "downright coarse and mean," writes the Medical Record, in what is a medical journal seems a somewhat unusual burst of sentimentality. State board of health says human beings as they run, are worth approximately $4,000 apiece. One college professor (the possessor, it seems safe to assume, of one of "these phoenixes") multiplies the health board figures by 10, and even then doesn't know whether $40,000 is enough for "the precious human product." Another "E. laughs" both estimates out of it, and places the average man's value at but $20, which makes babies $4,000 apiece "decidedly losing investments." You might just as well, argues the board, adopt the German scientists' method, viz., make a quantitative analysis of the body, calculate the weight of the bones, hair, fat, sugar, and paste the resulting price label on the living human being, or adopt standard rate of so much per pound, these counting-room and butcher-shop styles of human statistics are all necessary to interest the public the better conservation of human life. There must be something very wrong with our civilization. For each point of view it must be added there is not a little to be said, but neglecting the question of the value implications of such proceedings, the estimates really mean very little. From the extra-parental point of view babies differ as much in value as books or pictures. Some become useless to their own and future generations, others are social liabilities rather than assets. But they all look alike to the sociologist. As yet he has no way of making an early separation of sheep and goats. Perhaps some day the eugenists will be able to afford value labels in the cradle. Until that time every baby will remain a sort of human mystery. And in the meantime an attempt to standardize them commercially is an obvious futility.

Piece of Newton's Apple Tree.

The British Royal Astronomical society has recently become the owner of an interesting, because apparently well authenticated, relic of Sir Isaac Newton. This is a small log from the apple tree in the garden at Woolthorpe, on which the famous apple, the most famous apple since Eve and Eden, with the possible exception of those of Helen of Troy and Wilhelm Tell, grew. Mr. C. W. Wadler of Burwash, Sussex, who presented the log to the society, sent the following history with it. His father, born in 1807, was at school when 10 or 12, with the rector of Stoke, Lincolnshire, named Pearson. After a heavy storm news reached the school that Sir Isaac's apple tree had blown down. The rector and some of the boys at once set out for Woolthorpe, which is not far from Stoke. They found the tree, which for many years had been pruned up to preserve it, lying on the ground. The rector obtained a saw, and cut a number of small logs from one of the limbs. Mr. Wadler's father received one of these and preserved it with great care until his death, when it came down as one of the heirlooms to his son.

Science at McMurdo Sound.

Sir Archibald Geikie has recently received a condensed account of the scientific work of the Scott Antarctic expedition, extending to October 31, 1911, which was sent home from McMurdo Sound in the Terra Nova. It came in the shape of a letter from Edward A. Wilson, chief of Scott's scientific staff. A condensed record of the weather had been kept by self-registering instruments—temperature, wind velocity and direction, etc.—the upper air currents studied by means of small balloons up to a height of six miles; an unbroken record of the magnetic conditions obtained; observations of the Aurora made that was not very brilliant. Careful studies of the ice carried out; the discovery of evidence of an interglacial period of civaninity on which the famous apple, the most famous apple since Eve and Eden, with the possible exception of those of Helen of Troy and Wilhelm Tell, grew. Mr. C. W. Wadler of Burwash, Sussex, who presented the log to the society, sent the following history with it. His father, born in 1807, was at school when 10 or 12, with the rector of Stoke, Lincolnshire, named Pearson. After a heavy storm news reached the school that Sir Isaac's apple tree had blown down. The rector and some of the boys at once set out for Woolthorpe, which is not far from Stoke. They found the tree, which for many years had been pruned up to preserve it, lying on the ground. The rector obtained a saw, and cut a number of small logs from one of the limbs. Mr. Wadler's father received one of these and preserved it with great care until his death, when it came down as one of the heirlooms to his son.

Napkins on the Waiter's Arm.

Those super-fussy folks who object to such time-honored restaurant customs as the handling of butter "pats" by hand, the presence of the waiter's thumb in the soup, etc., etc., will be glad to learn of another opportunity to advertise their hygienic precocity. A British sanitarian has recently fallen upon the "waiter's napkin" with unusual virulence. That "piece of napkin," which, at a dinner or soiree is always soiled, has, it seems, a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence. As a fair and respectable piece of linen, it occasionally cleanses the dishes from which we eat as well as the other dirty paraphernalia. Behind our backs it becomes a general utility rag, used by its owner for trousers or even shoe dusting, or the removal of his excess perspiration.

It is this that a public protest against this dirt transferer, which masquerades under the guise of a cleanser, says our sanitarian. Every one will probably agree with him in the abstract, the waiter's napkin is certainly outrageously unsanitary and aesthetically offensive. But most of us are "easy going" and would rather not think about such things, when they can't be remedied. A waiter without a general utility napkin hanging on him somewhere wouldn't seem like a real waiter. An attempt to legislate it away from him would probably seriously aggravate the present strike. All things considered, therefore, it seems the part of wisdom to accept the napkin as a sort of unpleasant, non-detachable parasite on the waiter, and forget it. Just now it is particularly desirable to avoid all unnecessary irritation of the genus.

A Doubtful Victory.

Although the recent report of the British royal commission on vivisection was generally hailed as a victory for the vivisectionists, there is some excuse for the protest of Mr. Stephen Colclough in the Contemporary Review against this interpretation of the commission's findings. It was as much a victory for the ants as for the pro-life contending. Every one of the six recommendations "signed" unanimously by the commission is in the direction of enforcing greater restrictions upon the practice of vivisection and constitutes a recognition of the justice of the claims set forth in my evidence. This is substantially true, which cannot always be said of Mr. Colclough's writings on vivisection. With a "home" before claims in his last sentence, the above extract would state the case very fairly. In view of the fact that British physiologists have complained bitterly since the day of 1876, declaring that the act handicapped them in competition with continental investigators, seriously hampered their work, and measured the advance of medical science through the "unnecessary and meddlesome interference of persons not qualified to interfere"—with these facts in mind there is certainly some excuse for saying that the imposition of further restrictions is somewhat inaccurately characterized as a victory for vivisection. Except that the commission did not advise the entire abolition of experiments on animals, its report gave British vivisectionists little cause for rejoicing.

The "Unicorn" Ram.

Some "Unicorn" rams imported from Nepal several years ago astonished the visitors at the London Zoological gardens and puzzled the scientists. Mr. J. G. Bell finally suggested, in default of any other explanation, that the single horn was a product of man's interference and not a natural growth. This view has now been justified by investigations of the British resident in Nepal. The Unicorn ram is obtained by a somewhat brutal practice of securing with hot irons the budding horns of young barbat lambs and then covering them with a mixture of soap and oil. After this treatment they grow together. The purpose of this curious custom is not indicated in the British resident's report. Except as a means of mystifying the zoologists, there seems no obvious explanation.

The Museum Lecturer.

It is reported in Nature that the installation of an official guide to the collections of the British museum has been such a success that the Natural History museum's south Kensington has added a similar functionary to its staff. He will make two trips a day through the museum, each one lasting an hour and presumably involving a visit to and brief explanation of the most interesting and instructive exhibits. To say that this plan will double the educational value of the museum is to put the case for it very highly. For many of the visitors, probably the vast majority of them, the collections in such museums are described upon nothing. The same thing is true to a lesser degree in zoological gardens, and even art museums. The provision of a lecturer, sufficiently (and obviously) scientific or artistic, so that the tiring problem was eliminated, would add enormously to the value of every public museum. There seems no way in which the amount of money necessary to secure the services of a really competent man for this position could be spent to better advantage.

many years ago, made the Greenwich meridian the time regulator of the world—or at least the clock regulator. It now the daylight savers of Great Britain vary their clocks without any reference to the real time, to suit their business habits, and make the change not only for good and all, but see-saw the hands back and forth twice a year utter confusion will be introduced into a scientific system, in total disregard of existing well-considered and well-established international relations." A change of real value, for which the daylight savers might work to the general advantage, is that to a full 24-hour day, with elimination of the A. M. and P. M. distinctions. This change has just been made, it seems, on the Nord and Est Railways in France. Their clocks and time tables are now based on the new system. The clocks were ingeniously changed by simply adding a circle of figures from 12 to 24 inside the 1 to 12 circle.

TURKISH PRESS LAWS

From the Dundee Advertiser.

A document of exquisite humor has just been published in the Turkish press. It is the regulation issued by the press censorship under Abdul Hamid. It leaves nothing to chance. For example, the papers must publish in the first place the news about the inestimable condition of the health of the ruler, then about the progress of agriculture and trade in Turkey. And again: "All matters of a personal character should be strictly avoided, and if the editor hears of such-and-such a governor or governor-general being dismissed for theft or murder, or some such criminal offense, he should regard the report as unfounded and abstain from publishing it."

NEW VEHICLE FOR THE DESERT

From the London Times.

The recent successful application of a propeller working on the principle of a means of propulsion both for a road vehicle and for a small lake boat, has been followed by some interesting experiments by French officers in Algeria with a kind of sledges mounted on six wheels driven by a motor-power motor and similarly equipped with a propeller. This vehicle, which carried three persons, travels easily over the rolling sand at a speed of 12 to 18 miles an hour, and is said to be able to climb gradients of one in five. It is believed that this new means of transport will solve many of the difficulties of communication in the Sahara, and it is hoped to fitting it with wings, not only to facilitate its progress, but to enable it on occasion to leap over obstacles in its path. Such a vehicle, if perfected, would doubt prove of considerable value in certain parts of Turkey, in Asia and Persia, as well as in North Africa.

PHOTOGRAPH SHOWING ACTUAL BATTLE SCENE IN BALKAN WAR

This remarkable picture shows General Martinovich and General Pankoff, directly behind the gun, with field glasses scanning the Turkish position. Tatarosch, as it was being bombarded by the big field guns of the Montenegrins. Tatarosch was taken during the advance on Scutari, in Albania. (Copyrighted by International News Service.)

LAW'S LATEST STUNT DEFIED DYNAMITE, AIR AND WATER

Rodman Law, who has jumped from every bridge he considers worth jumping from around New York city, has jumped from several high buildings and from the Statue of Liberty, started even those who know his daring and the other day, when he sailed out over the Hudson river in a balloon and at the height of 450 feet, exploded a large quantity of dynamite in his balloon, destroying it and dropping into the water. The report of the explosion startled the city and Law's leap into the water caused several alarm who were passing on ferry boats to faint. The picture shows him just after he landed in the Hudson. Apparently his nerves of steel and were not shaken by the stunt.

NOT PEACE, BUT A SWORD

"THINK not that I came to send peace on the earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword." * * * He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

Jesus, sending forth his twelve disciples, was instructing them in their duties. The thing above all others that he sought to impress upon their minds was that they were to serve. It was to serve humanity that he came to earth; it was in order that they might be prepared to carry on his work after he had left them that he was sending them out on their first missionary tour.

He told them they must expect no other reward than the doing of their duty. They would be reviled and spat upon, as he had been; they would be accused, as he had been, of stirring up the people to revolt. But all this they were to expect. Jesus, he said, came not to bring peace, but a sword, and they could expect to receive no different treatment than what had been accorded their master. But even if they should perish, as he expected soon to perish, they still would have won the victory, for "he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

There are some senses in which the church of today needs to study and heed this message of the Master to the disciples. If there is a just complaint that can be made against the church today it is that it is devoting itself too largely to the ways of peace; it neglects the sword.

The spiritual fire of the church has always burned most brightly in times of persecution. It is when the church has settled back, at peace with all men, that it has been weakest, so far as effecting any great moral and spiritual reforms is concerned. Whenever the church is doing its duty it will be persecuted; not, in these days, by fire and wild animals, but by the withdrawal of the contributions of rich parishoners, by the ostracism of "our best people."

The sword is as necessary today as it was nineteen centuries ago when Jesus sent out his twelve disciples. It is as much the duty of each individual member of the church today, each guided by his own conscience, to set his face against wrong and injustice, as it was when Jesus drove the money-changers from the temple or scourged the scribes and Pharisees for their hypocrisy in tithing the mint and anise and cummin, while leaving undone the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith.

The sword can be wielded to better effect today than it could nineteen centuries ago. The world no longer cringes under the despotic sway of a Roman emperor; in the centuries that have passed since Jesus lived on earth mankind has been struggling forward, in the light he gave them; until now in most nations the people themselves are the emperors; they say what shall and what shall not be done.

But that makes the duty of the church only the more pressing. In other days there might have been on the part of good people some excuse for not "mixing in politics," since the will of one man was law. That excuse no longer exists. If wrong and injustice abound today the people themselves are to blame—and, back of the people, the church, which was put here by Jesus for the express purpose of serving humanity of leading it forward in the way of justice and mercy and faith.

There are signs that the church is awakening to its duty. Witness the services held today on this Home Mission Sunday. Often apologetically, but ever more generally, men and women of the church are engaging in politics. And they ought. Not the politics of seeking office merely for the emoluments thereof, but the noble politics of protecting those men and women and children who, without that protection, must suffer grievous wrong.

Wherever child labor is found, there should be the church, bringing not peace, but the sword.

Wherever women are compelled to work so hard and so long that their health and the health of those they bring forth is endangered; wherever they are paid so little wages that they are driven into sin, there again should be the church, sword in hand.

Wherever men must work for wages so small that they can support their families only as animals live; wherever these men work in industries where their lives are in constant jeopardy, there the church must be, if it is to carry out the command of Jesus, and it must be prepared to fight.

Wherever wrong and injustice and oppression are practiced, there the real disciple will be found, not seeking to bring a peace that can only continue wrong and injustice and oppression, but with the sword that, setting son against father, daughter against mother, shall finally result in the triumph of the right.

The church (and we refer not to the entity, but to the men and women who compose the church) must learn to use the ballot. There are wrongs to be righted, injustices to be corrected, oppressions to be ended. The sword of the ballot has been put into men's hands. If we use it we shall, possibly, drive from the church those modern Pharisees who forget justice and mercy and faith in their scramble to gather money, but, on the other hand, we shall be serving humanity, shall be doing the work we were put here to do.

And that, after all, alone counts. If the church loses its life in this service of humanity, shall it not find it again? If a man puts behind him all thought of personal success, to throw himself into this battle for humanity, shall he not after all be finding real life?

We have too long been accustomed to scoff at the thought that any altruistic, any Christian, spirit, should enter politics. But must it not enter, if humanity is to be served? Are not the toiling millions of the land waiting for just such service as Jesus meant his followers to render? Is there any other way in which wrong may be redressed, except as men give up their lives to the service of humanity?

Towards the middle of the last century this spirit of service took possession of the people of the north. They heard the cry of the slaves of the south, and taking up their swords they liberated them.

Today the same spirit is stirring in the breasts of men and women. The cry of the oppressed is being heard. The slow of faith say it is impossible to right these wrongs. A majority of men, they contend, were intended by their maker to suffer and endure.

But a new party has been formed that does not accept the fatalistic wrong cannot be righted, any more than the Republican party, in its inception, accepted the dictum that slavery was a heaven-ordained institution, to meddle with which would bring the end of the republic. The new party has girded on the sword, and the battle will not end until victory has been won.

And it should be the glory of the church; the boast of all men who are Christians, to rally to the battle. No man, in such a fight, can lose his life. He is sure to find it. For, in the truest sense, this battle for justice is in the service of human-kind. "And he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

PERSINGER

FOURTEEN years ago he left Colorado Springs, a mere child, but with his heart filled with determination. Today he comes home, a young man of 24, acclaimed already as America's greatest violinist.

He has shown himself to be made of real stuff. He is no weakling, to be spoiled by the adulation of sentimental women. The tremendous amount of work he has done, the sacrifices he has made, prove him to be all of a man. Withal, he has kept himself clean.

Colorado Springs may well do honor to this young man. He has devoted himself, not to the making of money, but to music. Through his violin he brings to humanity a message of hope and cheer—a message that, from the bow of a master, speaks to the hearts of all.

Genius he has, real genius, but it would have been wasted but for the genius of hard work that drove him on over every obstacle. Now he has won; he is one of the world's greatest artists. Both as artist and as man all Colorado Springs joins in welcoming Louis Persinger home.

STILL WAITING

ON DECEMBER 18, 1911, the case involving the right of the city of Colorado Springs to establish a municipal lighting plant, with power purchased from the Hydro-Electric company, was submitted to the state supreme court. Is there any reason why that court cannot render a decision?

FROM OTHER PENS

CHILREN IN CITIES

A nursery is planned for the court of divorces in Chicago. In London the begging boy is becoming a common sight. Children of 12 show all the characteristics of the professional beggar in the British metropolis. In France crime among juveniles is three times as great as crime among adults.

With all their agencies for "saving the child," the industrial centers of Great Britain, France, and the United States apparently find themselves unequal to the task. Philanthropy, charity, juvenile courts, and probation officers are merely calling attention to the child problem in the big cities. They are not solving it. They cannot solve it.

The child problem in the industrial centers of the above-named countries is only a part of the greater social problem, a part of the problem of underpaid or unemployed fathers and of slum homes, or of homes of all kinds.

The child beggars of London, investigation discloses, are children of men in the misery who do not earn enough to maintain a respectable family life. They live in the worst slums, which are the only places where they can find accommodation. But these are also the places where shame and decency are disappearing. The same is true of the juvenile criminals of Paris. Every criminal child is invariably traced to a slum shack and to an unemployed or underpaid father.

Germany has no industrial slums comparable with the slums of England, France, or the United States. It has outstripped these countries in the establishment of reforms which tend to ameliorate the condition of the workingman. It has minimized industrial accidents. It has gone a long way toward the solution of the problem of unemployment.

The fruits of these reforms are seen in the absence of the child problem which afflicts other countries. The German worker may be reduced to straits occasionally, but he is seldom so down that he has no roof over his head. There are bareheaded children in Germany, but they have not been reduced to the extreme of begging for food.

The problem of the child in cities is one of the gravest and most urgent of our social problems. Colonel Adams, superintendent of the St. Charles School for Boys, addressing the last annual conference of charities and correction, said of his charges: "They are mostly from the large towns and great cities; occasionally there is one from the country and from the average and the smaller towns. The environment of the large percentage of the lads has been that of the slums, tenements, and streets. When we recall that the largest percentage of truancy and delinquency is found among the denizens of such districts it is not a far cry to the conviction that if we could do no more than keep these young people away from the streets; if we could but get them into schools in which their interest may be directed forcibly to something else than to that antisocial behavior toward which so many in their ignorance are drifting; if we could do this we could accomplish much toward diminishing the train of juvenile offenders who are continually on their way to St. Charles and other similar institutions."

It has been estimated that in Chicago there are 23,416 children between the ages of 14 and 19 who are not in school. Over half are unemployed, and the remainder are in employment perhaps half the time at ill-paid jobs, teaching little and leading nowhere. One-third of the whole number had not yet reached the fifth grade before reaching the age at which our compulsory law permits them to give up schooling.

This situation, happily, is beginning to receive attention. The movement for vocational training and the continuation school is well started, with influential organizations behind it, such as the City Club, the Commercial club of Chicago, and the Bankers' association, while the Illinois branch of the Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology has appointed a committee to take up the problem of education as a preventive of crime, and through its legislative committee to recommend progressive legislation.

While differences of opinion have developed between some of the men and women interested in such educational legislation, it is hoped agreement may be brought about and all the friends of the reform united in their appeal to the next legislature. Division is likely to mean no legislation, and delay is costly. We have delayed too long in addressing this problem.

The problem of the child in cities we began by saying, the problem of the father. But the child of today is the father of tomorrow, and if we are to cure society and its train of ills, we must protect the child, direct him mentally and morally for an efficient adult life.

This is the most important factor in state building.

FIGHTING OVER MONTICELLO.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mrs. Martin W. Littleton has not given up her fight to secure an appropriation from congress to buy Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. She has organized an association to push the movement forward, but she is going to have a lot of trouble, and it does not now seem possible that she may win.

The greatest trouble is Jefferson M. Levy, who is the owner of the property, and who insists that under no circumstances will he part with it. He has a pride in his ancestor's home and he insists that he keeps it open to the public for all necessary purposes, so that there would be no gain even if he should sell it, which positively he will not. He made this statement last summer when the matter was before a committee of the house, and he sticks to his position.

In case congress should appropriate money for the purchase, it is difficult to believe that the right of eminent domain could be exercised in this case. Here is a pretty piece of law concerning which there may be a difference of opinion, but it is hard to see why Mr. Levy should be permitted to part with his property for no particular public benefit. In any case, it seems hardly likely that congress would compel proceedings. Generally it has been hard enough to secure historic spots or documents when the purchasers were eager to sell.

As the situation stands the public has access to Monticello under normal restrictions. It is located a long distance from the center of curiosity seekers and government ownership would attract no more pilgrims than now attend the shrine. It so happens that Mr. Wilson was educated at Charlottesville, a few miles away, and he will probably have some thing to say in the matter if congress puts it up to him.

Jefferson's services to his country will be remembered wholly apart from his homestead.

SCRIPTURE

H SAMUEL 5: 19-25.

And David inquired of the Lord, saying, Shall I go up to the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into mine hands? And the Lord said unto David, Go up: for I will doubtless deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

And David came to Baal-perazim, and David smote them there, and said, The Lord hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters. Therefore he called the name of that place Baal-perazim.

And the Philistines came up, yet again, and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.

And when David inquired of the Lord he said, Thou shalt not go up; but fetch a compass behind them, and come upon them over against the mulberry trees.

And let it be, when thou hearest the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt beat thine enemy; for then shall the Lord go out before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

And David did so, as the Lord had commanded him; and smote the Philistines from Geba until thou came to Gazer.

GOLF TWO MILES UP

Gyantse, Tibet, Has Highest Golf Course in World.

From the Kansas City Journal.

The chief claim to fame that Gyantse possesses is the part it played in the Tibetan mission of 1904; in time, perhaps, this fame may be eclipsed by the fact that it boasts the highest golf course in the world. The next highest golf course at Gullmers in the Himalayas, which is only 8,600 feet above sea level, but Gyantse, standing at a height of 13,100 feet, easily bears off the palm for golf at a high altitude. Gyantse does not to the casual observer, suggest golf, nor does it even appear to be able to furnish room for golf courses, but where Scotchmen congregate, though their total number be only three, a course had to be made, and it has been.

Provided the caddies are willing, golf is possible all the year round, the most suitable months being January, February and March, these being the months of the famous, or rather infamous, dust storms. The course is situated on the bank of the river, the average length of the holes is 280 yards, the longest over 500 yards, and the shortest 120 yards. There is no grass on the course, the whole surface being a hard baked clay, over which, especially in the winter, a film of sand is blown; where this sand drifts a "bunker" is formed. The chief hazards are collections of stones, pits, withered trees, wild irises and sand. Out of the two last named are not even Brad could play, and it is here that the advantage of the local ruler is seen. Some of these may be of interest:

1. No ball can be lost in Gyantse. If not found within a reasonable time another is put down where the first one is thought to have been lost, without penalty.
2. The lie of a ball in sand can be improved by gently rubbing it with hand or foot (other than the difficulty of the shot has to be experienced to be appreciated.)
3. All thorns may be removed from the ball.

Besides the usual caddies (one of whom, by the way, is a Tibetan girl), a forecaddie is an essential here. His duties are not limited to watching where the balls go; he has other tasks to perform, the most important of these being to guard the flagstaffs from falling into holes, and carry them to a place of safety after the round is completed. The reason of this is that firewood is very scarce in Gyantse, and even such a slender piece of wood as a flagstaff would be too tempting a bait for a Tibetan. The hole (this is also to judge by their rapid disappearance, not unpopular though not catered for) is what the hole is put in by a Chinese sentry, and a few Tibetans watch the balls drive off, the expression on their faces seems to be one of astonishment that anyone could be foolish enough to waste so much energy chasing a ball. Why not sit at home and drink "chang" they seem to say. They little know the attractions of golf, however, and not even the obstacles which nature has put in its present Gyantse golf from flourishing.

Tibetans already play one Scotch game, curling; perhaps in a few years they may take up golf and a future champion may hail from the land of the Lamas.

Until 40 applications for near-beer licenses, aggregating $20,000, were received at Jackson, Miss. It was not generally known that a clause had been slipped into the Mississippi privilege tax law at the recent legislative session licensing the sale of near-beer. The clause is there, and provides that license may be granted for sale of imitation beer of nonintoxicating character. It is like the beer, small size, and taste like beer, and the sale thereof is legal if the dealer pays a state privilege tax of $50 per annum.

THE HASKIN LETTER

THE FISH INDUSTRY

II—UNITED STATES BUREAU OF FISHERIES

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The decrease of the supply of natural fish in various parts of the country led to the establishment in 1871, of a federal commission which is now known as the Bureau of Fisheries and is under the jurisdiction of the department of commerce and labor. In its 42 years of existence, this bureau has accomplished an almost unbelievable amount of good work in securing a better recognition of the importance of fish cultivation and protection. In the beginning the bureau or commission was only given authority to conduct investigation as to the causes of the decrease of fish, both upon the coast and in the interior waters. It soon developed the possibility of rendering practical service in the way of supplying the fish to remedy the disease, and in recognition of this fact, congress from time to time has increased its authority and enlarged its functions until it is today recognized as one of the most important agencies in the conservation and increase of the food supply of the nation.

One of all the work of the bureau is now conducted, attention is given to the conservation of all sources of supply. Much of the decrease of fish was due to the fact that in the fishing industry fish were caught and killed without reference to their size and condition, and the sacrifice of female fish during the spawning season meant the loss of the spawn from which the supply of future fish would properly come. For this purpose fish hatcheries were established and arrangements were made to have the fishermen preserve the fish eggs and turn them over to the government officials, who provided facilities for hatching them and afterwards distributing the young fish where the need was greatest.

Big Fish Hatchery.

A most important feature of this work has been in connection with the cod fisheries along the New England coast. One of the most important of the United States fisheries stations is located at Gloucester. Here are hatched millions of fish eggs each year. When the cod fishermen go out in their boats, sometimes for a trip of several weeks, they carry with them, as provided by the government, for the preservation and the fertilization of the eggs taken from the fish in this way the young fish or fry are raised to supplement those that are hatched in the natural manner. It is claimed that a much larger percentage of the eggs are hatched artificially than in the natural state, and the conditions are kept undisturbed, and the young fish are raised to the point of being ready to be taken up by the fishermen. In other parts of the country they are frequently brought in to the hatcheries by the fishermen, and in some instances are sold to the government.

There are 32 main hatcheries, and 102 auxiliaries, in the United States, besides the hatcheries of the United States Fisheries and during the year ending June 30, 1912, the output was more than 3,426,000,000 fry, over 32,000,000 fingerlings, yearlings and adult fish. During 1912, 228,000,000 fish eggs consigned to the hatcheries which are now being operated by different states and 335,000,000 were shipped to foreign governments. Most of these fish planted were of the kind most valuable for food, such as the Pacific coast salmon, yellow perch, cod, rock bass, pike, perch, flounder and lobster. There are hatcheries upon the Great Lakes and by special arrangement with the Canadian government the United States bureau of fisheries conducts two egg collecting stations for white fish, also and lake trout at points in Ontario. In the inland states there are a number of hatcheries which are chiefly engaged in the production of eggs of rainbow trout, land-locked salmon, brook trout, bass, pike and drum fish.

Undertakes Preservation.

Recently the bureau has undertaken the preservation of a large number of the fish obtained by the overflow of the upper Mississippi valley. In the low lands the waters recede leaving disconnected pools which either dry or if they remain until winter solid so that the fish are lost. By using these waters the bureau has large numbers of these fish and turn some of them to their original state and distribute others to jacent waters. Long trains of cars employed during the summer in carrying the fish thus saved.

It was surely an ingenious American who devised the fish transport cars which are used by the bureau. These cars contain tanks in which fish are placed and, if necessary, may be added to keep the water the required temperature. In transportation of such delicate as brook trout, there is great danger. The water becomes too warm, the fish are always made to ice provided at certain stations along the route. The cars are attached to the fastest trains in order no tin lost and they are equipped with heat, possible springs to avoid slightest unnecessary jolt to the fish. The comfort of the passengers is not overlooked, for the cars are supplied with comfortable seats for the day time. The Pullman sleeping berths for the night. Frequently fish eggs will be laid in the tanks upon these cars, they are traveling at the rate of miles an hour.

Biological Work.

One of the most important functions of the bureau of Fisheries is its biological investigations, which are being continually increased. In the past year considerable attention has been given to the investigation of the life history of the American oyster, and the results have been of value both to the fisherman and to the biologist. Transfers Prove Beneficial.

The acclimatization of certain fish and their transfer from waters of one locality to those of another is a subject upon which the bureau has already made considerable progress. The results have already proved of great economic value. The introduction of sea bass from the Pacific coast has been one of the greatest successes in this respect. As the sea bass is a native of the Pacific coast, it was not surprising that the sea bass was introduced from the Pacific coast. its success in the Allegheny mountain region has been especially gratifying. It is not designed as a rival to the brook trout native to this region, but rather as a substitute for a species which has become scarce chiefly because of modern industrial conditions. A number of old world fish have also been introduced here with good results, the best known being the German carp. This fish has been subjected to a good deal of criticism but as commercial proposition its introduction was a success. It supports special fisheries in 15 states, and is regularly taken for market in nearly all of them. Its sales amount to more than 20,000,000 pounds annually which affords considerably over half a million dollars to the fishermen and it is caught with less time, expense and risk than for other varieties of fish.

Government Aids Industry.

The first investigations carried on for the purpose of studying the conditions of deep sea fish were made possible by the cooperation of the United States navy, which placed a special steamer at the disposal of the fish commission. But as the need became apparent facilities for this work were provided by special appropriations from congress. There are now two vessels under the direction of the bureau of fisheries. The fish hawk was built in 1910 and carries a crew of 45 men and is of 441 gross tons burden. It has made an exploration of the past conditions from Maine to Texas and has been used extensively in the catching of shark and other fish. The fish hawk has distributed to the different streams along the coast. The special pride of the bureau of fisheries in the Albatross, a beautiful tin snore steamer with 1,074 tons displacement which was built especially for the use at a first cost of $190,000. The equipment of officers and men, numbering about 90, is furnished by the navy and there is in addition a small civilian staff, including a resident naturalist and a fishery expert, whom the practical work of the vessel is entrusted. The vessel has made several extended cruises to the southern and eastern parts of the Pacific, making visits to Japan, Hawaii and Alaska, and a number of surveys of the Pacific coast. It has completed a biological survey of the Philippine archipelago in which it accomplished some of the deepest ocean soundings record.

Useful Inventions a Result of Mere Chance

E. Chamberlain, in the Chicago Tribune.
It is repetitive history that many a person who has spent hours upon hours combining and recombining the factors of his problem has had the solution thrust upon his attention by the casualty of daily life. Such occurrences are the spice of research, and lead on many a weary investigator in hard and exacting labor. Here the field where the trained observer is all the advantage. For how many times may never be realized only because no one had eyes to behold the relation?

In our own time every best sugar story was confronted with these two problems: How most cheaply to move the beets from the storage sheds to the factory, and how to cleanse the beets from the dirt, small stones and rubbish carried from the earth silos. A German factory happened to have a considerable quantity of beets piled outside an open drain. A very heavy storm came on, and, when it was over, it was found that the beets had not only been carried to the very door of the factory, but were cleaned as well. From that time on every factory flushed its beets along a pipe from the storage shed to the factory by means of the two operations of transportation and washing. Thomas Kingsford discovered the process of making starch from Indian corn by chance. Starch could be made from potatoes and from wheat, but it always been found impossible to separate corn starch from the accompanying gluten.

Wife's Kitchen as Laboratory.
The wheat starch method did not work. Kingsford was a mechanic, working long hours, and all his experiments were made in his own kitchen. In his wife's pans, tubs and buckets his laboratory utensils. The unsatisfactory result of one of his experiments—a mush of cornmeal and water—he disgustedly threw into a tub. A little later his wife, Mrs. (Gladys) Kingsford, took the tub to the next day. Kingsford, surprised to find a small amount of fairly pure starch at the bottom of the tub, fortunately remembered owing in the tub, and thus the basic principle was discovered. Kingsford worked out a practical process of making corn starch commercially, and made a great fortune. The many technical processes of the plants were without doubt of accidental origin. Until comparatively recent times, there was no groundwork theory in either metallurgy, chemistry, and intelligent investigation planned to accomplish a certain end, cannot exist, without this groundwork. The only opportunity for practical progress was that afforded chance in conjunction with a keen inquiring observer. For instance, Romans knew nothing of the metal. But some observing Roman metal had found that when stones of certain kind were heated with copper, a hard, yellow metal was obtained. Thus brass was discovered, in this manner it was made for centuries.

Glass Discovery Accidental.
We know now that the stones which caused these curious properties were minerals calcareous and siliceous, silicate and carbonate of lime, respectively. They occurred together in a rock which, at that time, was called the iron ore. It is our authority for the

LONDON NOW HAS GAMBLING FEVER

GAME OF BACCARAT IS THE SENSATION

Many "Private" Residences Are Veritable Establishments for Gaming

By PHILLIP EVERETT
LONDON, Nov. 23.—London has the gambling fever very badly just now. The game of the moment is baccarat. There are fashions in these things. After the Tranby Croft scandal baccarat practically died out in England. It has probably never had such a vogue, however, as it has at the present time. Auction bridges are voted to glow by the ardent gambler. He wants his excitement quick and often and without any tedious preliminaries. Baccarat and its variations, chemin-de-fer, are just the games that supply the qualities he requires.

Now baccarat is an illegal game in England, but it is played every night in London in scores of places with more or less publicity. Most of these places are so-called "private" houses, but in many cases they have been taken for their present tenants expressly for the purpose, and so far as their privacy goes, there is little or no difficulty about gaining admittance. Any member of a London club who is known as a card player is liable to receive an invitation. It will probably come to him through a chance club acquaintance, or it may even come by post. Most of these entertainments do not begin until midnight.

Play frequently continues until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning. In many of the houses an admirable supper is provided by the "host," and visitors are treated with the greatest consideration. A good glass of wine and a Corona are always at their disposal. They are not pressed to play, but are invited to look on if they like, and every "guest" is asked to come when ever he pleases, and to bring his friends. Men only is the rule at most of these houses, but there have recently been started in one or two places baccarat parties where ladies are invited.

But, although so-called "private" houses are the chief meeting places for the gamblers, there are others. One of the most notable of these is a club in Piccadilly. Here some very high play goes on. The club is sumptuously furnished, and the outside is excellent. It is now the chief resort of men, many of whom would find it difficult to obtain membership of any reputable West end club. But this club is not by any means the only house in Piccadilly where baccarat is played.

There are also private houses in Berkeley square, Curzon street, Hay hill, Park lane, and several other parts of London where play can be indulged in on most evenings of the week. At some of these houses visitors are requested not to drive up to the door in taxicabs or motor cars after midnight. It is said that some well-known men may be seen at these houses.

EIGHT WHO DESERVE SLAPS

From a Persian Saying.
Eight men who deserve to be slapped on the face: He who despises a man of power, he who enters a house uninvited and unannounced, he who gives orders to a house not his own, he who takes a seat above his position, he who speaks to one who does not listen to him, he who intrudes on the conversation of others, he who seeks favors from the ungenerous, and he who expects love from his enemies.

First Chinese Celebration Under New Regime Is a Brilliant Affair

PEKIN, Nov. 23.—In spite of the pessimists who predicted all sorts of rioting and bloodshed, the celebration of the first anniversary of the revolution has passed off with perfect quietness. The president reviewed some 30,000 troops in Pekin. Some of the regiments were rather in trouble with the goose step, but the majority marched splendidly, and in their new European uniforms looked very smart. Standing on a red dais, President Yuan-Shih Kai received the salute. His feet were planted solidly apart, and he, indeed, had the appearance of a man of force and strength. Afterwards there was a reception, to which many foreigners were invited and here were to be seen many evidences of westernized China. Gentlemen wore all sorts of European garments in conjunction with Chinese silken robes.

Dressed a la Mode.

The most popular, perhaps, was a black bowler hat, with colored silk jacket and skirt. One was wearing an opera hat, blue silk jacket, red skirt and brown boots. Others attempted "complete outfits" of western clothes, but there were many slips, such as frock coat, evening dress waistcoat and brown boots.

At the end of the reception the president was walking among the guests when suddenly there was a great burst of spontaneous cheering, which was taken up by all the nationalities present. The British and American "Hip! Hip! Hurrah!" was noticeable, and so was the "Banzai!" of the Japanese. Yuan Shih Kai was delighted at this unexpected evidence of his growing popularity.

... of society. Paul J. Rainey, has called that he has started from London on another hunting expedition in Africa. He has chosen two delightful companions with tastes exactly like his own, the Marquis and Marchioness of Stafford.

The marquis, a little more than 24, is heir to the Duchy of Sutherland, and is a great sportsman, a fine shot, a lover of hounds and a daring traveler. The girl he married only last April was Lady Eileen Butler, daughter of Lord and Lady Lansborough. She is one of the most popular beauties in England. She is described as just the right sportswoman mate for her husband, a good rifle shot and a fine horsewoman.

ARE MEN TOO LAZY OR NERVOUS TO MARRY?

Bachelors Are Increasing in Number in London While Marriageables Are Unhappy

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Are men too lazy, too comfortable or too nervous to marry?

Bachelors are increasing in numbers in London, wedding are becoming scarcer, and mothers with marriageable daughters are unhappy.

"I wish sons and sons could be swept away," says a well-known woman writer.

"Young men nowadays are made altogether too comfortable at their flats and at their clubs to make them seek the companionship of a wife."

"They no longer regard housewife as something to be desired. They shirk the responsibilities of marriage because they are becoming more and more domesticated or because they can now so easily get maid servants and general servants to do a little housework."

"Indeed, the comforts of modern life tend to make a man regard a wife as an encumbrance rather than as a companion and helpmate."

"Why do men prefer a bachelor life?"

"In seeking an answer to this question all sorts and conditions of men have been asked. 'Why are you a bachelor?'"

"I have seen Mr. Bernard Shaw's play, 'Getting Married,' and I regard it as an awful warning to those who have designs on matrimony."

"I am doubtful, too, whether married men make the best husbands. All women should be married, but no men. They doubt also whether any woman would like to marry me for myself alone."

"A married man is a man who has loved one woman; a bachelor is a man who loves every woman," said Mr. Harold J. Birmley, a prominent member of the Emerson club.

"I am a bachelor and a lover of variety," he added.

PARIS STARTLED OVER USE DRUG

DEADLY HABIT IS ON THE INCREASE

Authorities Begin Crusade Against Dealers Who Handle Stimulant

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The use of drugs has lately reached such a height in Paris that sociologists consider it a most serious national danger, and their stern warnings have resulted in an energetic campaign against law-breaking druggists on the part of the authorities.

Within the last week inquiries instituted at Montmartre have established the guilt of four druggists whose names have not yet been made public, and they will be prosecuted for the illegal sale of poisons. Moreover, two arrests have been made of intermediaries between druggists and clients, and a third is momentarily expected.

The inquiries have set the police on the tracks of a widely ramified organization for the sale of stimulants and narcotics. This organization finds its clients among two separate classes. First of all there are the inveterate drug takers, among the ranks of whom are to be counted not a few doctors and a considerable number of actors, and drugs have become from some reason or other indispensable. In the case of this class of druggists, protected by the prescription of a qualified medical man, is beyond the risk of pursuit.

But there is a second class of what one may call casual drug-takers, recruited from the various population misnamed gay, which frequents the Montmartre district. The women, more especially, of this section, acquire the drug habit. A life lived almost wholly in an atmosphere of artificial light and facitious emotions, creates the craving for artificial excitement. In not a few cases also a silly desire to be in the swim "snobbish," the French have it, is the prime motive. Of course, the drug, from being a mere freak, soon becomes a terrible necessity. Hence a clandestine commerce in hashish, opium and morphine is carried on by unscrupulous druggists, often through intermediaries. Hence the police investigation. If there is no reason why their campaign, if rigorous, should not be effective. Fresh perquisitions are imminent in the two great seats of infection, Montmartre and the Latin Quarter.

and smoke I never could endure. In any case (if I may judge from the many columns she has contributed to the press these last months), the whole trend and coloring of her mind is growing ever more and more incompatible with "double harness."

"It is, therefore, just as well that some of us appeal to her as little as she appeals to us."

Here is the opinion of Mr. Horace Wyndham, the librarian at the Authors club:

"I have seen Mr. Bernard Shaw's play, 'Getting Married,' and I regard it as an awful warning to those who have designs on matrimony."

"I am doubtful, too, whether married men make the best husbands. All women should be married, but no men. They doubt also whether any woman would like to marry me for myself alone."

"A married man is a man who has loved one woman; a bachelor is a man who loves every woman," said Mr. Harold J. Birmley, a prominent member of the Emerson club.

"I am a bachelor and a lover of variety," he added.

INCREASE PETROL PRICE

CAUSES CABBIES ALARM

LONDON, Nov. 23.—What is to become of the taxicab? The increase of 10 cents a gallon in the price of petrol threatens to ruin the taxicab industry and to drive these vehicles off the streets.

The companies under present conditions have great difficulty to keep "go-down" and it is declared that the new burden, representing an additional charge of 36 cents daily for each cab, will bring complete disaster to the industry unless the drivers consent to pay for petrol at the enhanced price.

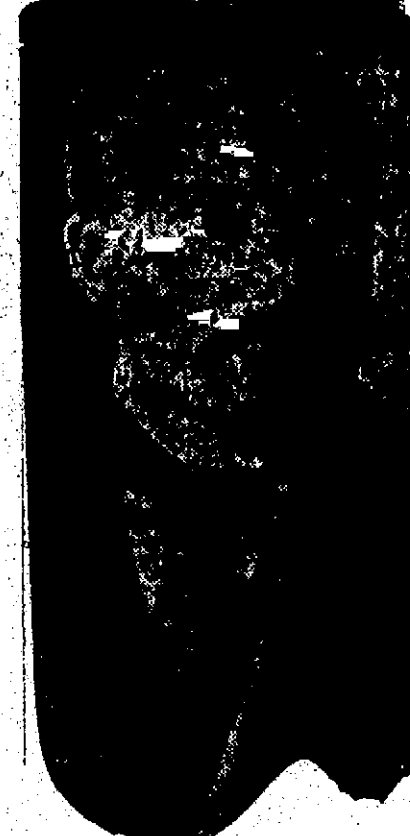

The men contend that it is as much as they can do to make a living now, and they cannot afford to pay the extra charge. Indeed, several of the drivers showed plainly that if they are made to bear any part of the extra cost another taxicab strike will take place.

Meanwhile, the home office will not allow fares to be raised. Who is to pay?

The question whether any means can be found of circumventing the powerful ring which is controlling petrol prices is agitating the minds of the taxicab proprietors and motor car owners.

The market is dominated from two points—a British combine of firms and an American company. These control the source of petrol supply from the east and other parts of the world.

The automobile association has recently been endeavoring to formulate a scheme for the benefit of its members whereby terms may be secured with outside petrol suppliers in order that members may get petrol at a price, consistent with fair trading. Petrol at a reasonable figure is the object of the association.

Monsieur Raymond Poincare, prime minister of France, who, it is popularly believed, can be the nation's next president if he desires. He has not yet made it known, however, whether he will be a candidate at next February's election.

BALKAN WAR OPENS EYES OF ENGLAND

Turks Not Ripe for Political Freedom, Leading Men Declare

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Undoubtedly there have been times when the present liberal government with some justice might have been accused of not being in harmony with the English people even in regard to its foreign policy, a subject of which the English as a nation are incredibly ignorant, and in which they take very little interest under ordinary circumstances, but there is no doubt that Sir Edward Grey expressed the opinion of the whole thinking part of the English people when he recently stated in the house of commons that England did not hesitate to recognize the right of the Balkan states to determine their own conditions of peace.

There was a time not so very long ago when the people of England were inclined to think that reformed Turkey should be given another chance to show what it might accomplish when liberated from the curse of the despotic rule of Abdul Hamid. Later events showed that the people of Turkey were not ripe for political freedom, that they were centuries behind the civilized people of Europe and that the new government no more than the old inclined to carry out the reforms in Albania and Macedonia which constituted the country's moral debt to Europe.

The war opened our eyes even more. It opened our eyes still more to the fact that the Ottoman empire was honeycombed with corruption, and crept and rotten in every way, and when the Turkish people began to clamor for the return to power of Abdul Hamid the country from utter humiliation the British people realized that the interests of Europe were best served by the new and marvellously vigorous federation of young states taking up the problem of permanently solving the miserable Balkan question that has always menaced the peace of Europe, and from that moment on English statesmen would have dared to take part of the end, they had gathered at such frightful sacrifices of human life.

WAR IN NEAR EAST

HURTS MANCHESTER

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Manchester trade with the near east is now practically at a standstill, and there is a likelihood of short time being enforced in several mills and warehouses.

Lancashire has been affected by the Balkan war more than any other part of England, for cotton goods form a great part of England's trade with Turkey. Some idea of the extent can be gathered from the Board of trade returns. These show that the total enumerated exports from Great Britain to Turkey during the nine months ending September, 1912, were $25,000,000.

Of this amount, $18,000,000 represents the value of the cotton piece goods sent to Turkey. Turkey is the third best customer Lancashire has, only India and China taking more cotton goods.

Anxiety is being felt in some quarters as to the probable effect of a victory of the Balkan states on Lancashire's trade with Turkey. Turkey is practically an open market for Lancashire goods. The other countries, particularly Bulgaria, are manufacturers themselves, and if they obtain a hold on Turkish territory, it is more than likely that they will do all they can to shut out Lancashire manufactures.

Lancashire would thus have to meet a dangerous rival on unequal footing.

GERMANS DECLARE STATESMEN OUTWITTED IN BALKAN LEAGUE

Allowed Formation of a Secret Campaign Against Turks Without Getting on Inside

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Slowly the truth is dawning upon the statesmen of Germany that the history of their own empire is repeating itself in the near east, that a new great power is being born there under circumstances which are greatly reminiscent of conditions in Prussia in the space of time from 1854 to 1871. As Germany owes its greatness to two men, Bismarck and Moltke, so Bulgaria has its Bismarck and Moltke in the persons of King Ferdinand and General Savoff, the only material difference being that Bulgaria's Bismarck is also the ruler of his country while the original Bismarck was continually hampered and opposed by a faint-hearted and anything but intelligent king, William I, the grandfather of the present kaiser.

Had Germany realized in time what is happening in the Balkan states she undoubtedly would have thought twice before she consented to send the Turkish government a warship to bring the dethroned Abdul Hamid back to Constantinople at a time when she should have known that not even a return to the old regime which superstitious Mussulmen were clamoring for, could save Turkey from its fate. This was one of Germany's diplomatic mistakes, one of the many she has made during recent years, and another was her supposition that England, hearing the effects of a Turkish defeat in her great Indian empire, would at the last moment step in and at least pretend to act her part as the powerful protector of Islam. The recent utterances of Sir Edward Grey in the British house of commons to the effect that England would under no conditions consent to take part in any action the powers intended to deprive Balkan states of the legitimate fruit of their victory, put an end, however to this illusion.

Germany Must Stand Back.

Under the present circumstances Germany has no choice but to give up every attempt at playing a brilliant part in settling permanently the great Balkan question.

What interests the people of Germany most just now is to know whether their own statesmen have once again been outwitted. This time by one of their own allies. There are many things which seem to show that the Balkan league was formed in September, there was a secret understanding, possibly with Russia, but at events with Austria, whose interest in the Balkans surpasses those of other nations, and the question is: Germany informed by her partner in the triple alliance of any such understanding? It does not look like it.

Among the many signs which point to the existence of a secret agreement between Austria and the Balkan states, none is more significant than the fact that the only foreign correspondent who has been permitted to go near the front and not only things with his own eyes, but also to see the great Serbian army, reports of what was taking place an Austrian army officer, Lieutenant Wagner, a personal friend of a member of Austria's ruling family and representative of an official Austrian paper.

Austria in on Secret.

Another sign is the fact that Austria, while at first pretending to adhere firmly to the doctrine of status quo, gave up her standpoint as a state should do so without exciting much suspicion and not only this, she permitted Serbia to take possession of the sanjak of Novi Bazar, territory she had hitherto maintained must remain Turkish or fall into own hands to keep apart Serbia and Montenegro. There is also reason to suppose that when Roumania has gained neutral Austria has had something to say with this too.

Everything seems to show that Ferdinand, the Bulgarian Bismarck, is the greatest diplomat in Europe today and a few weeks should a war price he has paid Austria, Russia for permission to extend kingdom to twice its former size, must have paid something, of course, and there is hardly any doubt when peace conditions are everywhere else but Germany will turn to see whether something that German diplomacy has suffered another defeat.

WOULD PROTECT PUBLIC BY FILM CENSORS

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The police authorities who guard our moral, fare always seem to think that it is considerably less to ruin the morals and virtuousness of the English people than it does to endanger the morals of our continental brethren are continually devising new guards against the danger of temptation.

Now we are to have a censor cinematographic films. The censor has already been found and announced that in the future we are not to see religious scenes, bathing, and films which place in and policemen in a ridiculous light.

French Socialist Leader Solves Problem

Confronting Several of Balkan States

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—At a time when every newspaper on the continent is full of editorials and comments on the events in the Balkans, an article by the French Socialist leader, Jaures, has attracted considerable attention. Writing in L'Humanite, he discusses the probable outcome of the war. He refers to the widespread jubilation over the Turkish collapse, and points out that a Turkey endeavoring to regenerate and democratize its institutions would certainly have been more useful to civilized humanity than a Turkey expelled from Europe thrust back by force of arms into hatred and religious fanaticism. "The reaction may think it well to rejoice at this victory of the forces of reaction, and yet their rejoicing may well be short lived," he declares.

"For what will be the effect of their victory upon the Balkan states themselves if they succeed in the Turkish territorial inheritance," he asks. "In their turn they will be faced with the problem of ruling those of alien nationality and alien creeds to their own, and the rivalries between the various Balkan states, temporarily suspended by their military alliance, will revive when the immediate object that alliance have been gained."

Arbitration Will Fail.

"These difficulties cannot be met day by day by arbitrary and repressive methods of government. They can be solved only by widely conceived democratic reforms, securing for those of all creeds and all races such a degree of liberty and of equality that the antagonism of yesterday will disappear."

"The enterprise of the Balkan states can only be saved from ultimate revolutionary lines, inasmuch as these regions, founded in the 19th century by the Turkish oligarchy, are the result of the war in the Balkans should be to set an example of European advance, and to the joy of the reactionaries may be brief."

No Office Man Need Be Cooped Up--- out of touch with the busy world's golden opportunities.

Chances to make money—chances to go up the ladder—chances to profit in a score of ways—are offered the Man at the Desk if he has The Gazette's classified pages before him.

Just a few moments to this department every morning while you are scanning the pages for the world's news—is sure to mean big gain to you.

Get the habit. It's the easiest thing in the world. You'll find these pages have a direct personal interest. They seem to be talking TO YOU.

Openings or offers for which you are just the man reach out and beckon to you. Look these pages over. They are teeming with suggestions for a live, brainy fellow like yourself.

They will furnish you with no end of pointers for building up your income in a pleasant, legitimate way—without neglecting your present work.

You'll meet there the man eager to buy something you have which you would be happy to sell.

You are sure to find the man who pays well for work you have a special talent for doing—and could conveniently carry on "after hours."

It is the clearing house for the man with wants and the man with ambition.

Begin now. Turn to the classified pages of today's paper.

And remember—if you don't find what suits you—tomorrow's paper will bring up a brand new lot from scores of other advertisers.

It's a stream of business chances that never dries up—but comes to you fresh and sparkling every day.

J. D. Hawkins Takes Exception to Article Concerning Ophir

The following article from the Cripple Creek Times of yesterday's issue, under the head "Jennie Sample Enforces Contract Made With Ophir," is declared by J. D. Hawkins of this city, general manager of the Jennie Sample, to be incorrect.

"While several have asked the reason why the Ophir lease was given up by Edwin Gaylord and while the leaseholder himself would never say it was declared last night that the Jennie Sample company had intervened and is enforcing its contract made some time back with Mrs. Cone, owner of the Ophir, which gives the company the exclusive right to work below the tenth level of the Ophir shaft for five years and since the ore which Gaylord opened for below the tenth level would not allow him to take it out.

"Since the agreement was reached between the Jennie Sample company and Mrs. Cone the shaft of the Ophir, which is an incline, was sunk about 200 feet and a good deal of lateral work was undertaken from the twelfth level. Gaylord went to the expense of re- timbering the shaft the first 140 feet and it is said that he had a good hole of ore opened but the Jennie Sample refused him permission to work it since it was in violation of the contract made between the two companies.

"This agreement was reached in order to conclude litigation between the two concerns.

"There were several after the Ophir lease and it was given to Gaylord since he would undoubtedly most thoroughly develop the territory.

"It may be that when the next stockholders meeting of the Jennie Sample comes up the question of rescinding this contract will be considered and there is a possibility that Jennie Sample shareholders will permit it, since that company is not working at this time in the Sample property. The enforcement of the contract only serves to prevent the development of the ground and keeps back the shipments of ore and does not serve to benefit the Jennie Sample company.

"It is doubted that the Sample company or any of its officers will ever be given a lease on the Ophir by Mrs. Cone and they cannot expect to make any personal gains through the enforcement of the contract.

"If this is the status of the case it will be some time before the Ophir shaft is worked.

"Mr. Hawkins asks that his reply to the above article be published, so that stockholders in his company may know the facts. His letter follows:

Editor Cripple Creek Times, Cripple Creek, Colo.

Dear Sir:—I notice in your issue of November 23rd a prominence is given to a statement regarding the Jennie Sample, evidently furnished you by parties unacquainted with the facts of the case, and which, by its reading, tends to mislead the stockholders of the Jennie Sample; otherwise, I should not think it necessary to take any notice of it.

So far as the statement that the Jennie Sample company enforces its contracts is concerned, I assume that no sane person would criticize the company for doing that—it is what contracts are made for.

The statement is also made that the Ophir shaft, on Mrs. Cone's property, was sunk 200 feet, and a deal of lateral work done on the twelfth level, omitting to state, however, that this extensive work was done by the Jennie Sample company themselves, and is all on their own territory. The statement that Mr. Gaylord opened ore below the tenth level is as erroneous as all the rest of the statements in the article.

The question as to whether Mrs. Cone will ever grant the Jennie Sample company a lease on her property is settled by the fact that the same was offered to us and declined.

So far as the Jennie Sample company's treatment of Mr. Gaylord is concerned, it is sufficient to state that within the last two days the same was offered from him a letter thanking him cordially for the courtesy which had been shown him in regard to the transactions between the Jennie Sample company and himself regarding the workings of the Ophir property.

It is not fair that reflections on the management of the company should be allowed to go unchallenged and, in the spirit of fairness, we ask you to publish this letter.

Yours very truly,
J. D. HAWKINS,
General Manager.

GOLD IN THE LA SAL MOUNTAINS

Report on Investigations Made by United States Geological Survey

In June, 1911, a reconnaissance of the north end of the northern group of the La Sal mountains, Utah, was made by James M. Hill of the United States Geological Survey for the purpose of ascertaining the extent and value of the ore deposits and the prospect for future development of the region. A report on this work has just been published by the geological survey as Bulletin 720-M, entitled, "Notes on the Northern La Sal Mountains, Grand County, Utah."

The La Sal mountains are in the Colorado Plateau region, which is characterized by long mesas cut by canyons from 2,000 to 2,500 feet deep, with steep cliffs to 300 feet high. Above this relatively level plateau, which has a general elevation of 5,000 feet, the northern group of the mountains rises abruptly at Mount Wase to a height of 12,500 feet.

Two classes of mineral deposits are worked in the vicinity of Basin and Mesa. In the mountains there are several quartz mining prospects and at least one locality where placer gold has been recovered. The quartz mines have made practically no production, and it is probable that $5,000 would cover the entire output from both quartz and placer mining in the region.

The quartz prospects in the northern La Sal mountains are few in number and the value of the ore is low even at the surface, where many gold-bearing deposits in other districts are enriched. The veins, so far as they could be seen by Mr. Hill, are small and contain much barren quartz. The high charges for transportation to the railroad at Cisco, ranging from $15 to $15 for out-bound, and $25 a ton for in-bound freight, are an additional handicap.

The placers of Wilson Mesa are apparently of small extent. They contain only a small quantity of gravel, and all the gold in it cannot be saved by sluicing, because some of it is carried in boulders, which require some sort of crushing. They include a pinch material that surely carries nothing of value that it would hardly seem advisable to install expensive crushing and amalgamating machinery unless it were found practical to sort the ore from the waste by hand. Besides these unfavorable conditions only a very small and uncertain supply of water is available for placer operations. The placers contain, however, some free gold that might be procured at a profit if the deposits are worked to a small way.

A copy of this report may be obtained free on application to the director of the geological survey at Washington, D. C.

MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD

In 1911, according to the United States Geological survey, 2,380 ounces of palladium were produced, 300 ounces from crude foreign and domestic mines and the rest from the refining of copper ores and copper bullion.

Palladium finds a fairly large use in technology. Circles of astronomical instruments are made of it, and it is also employed in watchmaking. Its most extensive use is probably for catalytic alloys in dental work. It is also employed in dental work. It is also employed in dental work.

According to the bureau of statistics, 1,218 troy ounces of palladium were imported into the United States in 1911, the value assigned being $56,000, or $46.22 an ounce.

PORTLAND LESSEES SHIP AVERAGE 20 CARS MONTH

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 23.—The average output from the leases on the north and south ends of the Portland estate, Battle mountain, will run perhaps three cars a week, while the average grade of the ore will run in the neighborhood of an ounce to the ton. The lessees are now shipping between 15 and 20 cars a month. There are six or seven blocks left for lease on the north end of the estate and it is possible that some new work will start up shortly.

The Dazell lease on the north end is shipping some ore which is collected in the course of the mining on the first level while the sinking of the shaft has been going on for some time. The same shaft is expected to be developed at a new depth and in that event it means that Dazell will be shipping from his block for some time.

Developments in this lease to this time have proved entirely satisfactory. The strike made on the 1,600-foot level, it is said, is better than it has ever before been and in both the north and south headings fine assays are being taken. A good deal of ore is being shipped from this place.

The showing made on this level has been very encouraging and there is every reason to believe that the company will sink down another hundred feet just as soon as the recession of water will permit it, as the officials are anxious to determine what the 1,700-foot level holds. This may not be undertaken for some time but within four or five months there is every reason to believe that the No. 3 shaft will go down a lift of a hundred feet.

ACACIA CO. DECLARES CHRISTMAS DIVIDEND

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 23.—The directors of the Acacia Gold Mining company, of which Kenneth McKenzie is general manager, have declared a dividend of a cent a share to be paid at Christmas time. The dividend was paid from royalties paid into the company by the lessees working the north and south Burns property. At the beginning of the year the royalties amounted to a thousand dollars a month and this was at the time that some very good ore was being shipped by the lessees under the South Burns Mining company.

This is the tenth dividend of the company making a total of $138,899 which has been paid to the stockholders.

Indications are that the company will start in on another period of production shortly since there is a good deal of development work being done.

SHIPPING CAR A DAY FROM THE LEE DUMP

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 23.—Knute Packard and Theobald, leasing the Lee dump of the Isabella mine, during the present good weather, are shipping a car a day of ore which is of a better than dump grade stuff.

J. Malone, superintending the Empire State dump, is getting out about three cars a week of fair dump ore and expects to maintain this rate of production for some time to come.

ROYAL FLUSH MINE IS TO HAVE LARGE MILL

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo., Nov. 23.—Final plans have been made for the erection of a 400-ton mill and smelter for the Royal Flush mine at Hahns Peak. H. O. Granberg, manager of the company, says: "We have done over 10,000 feet of development and expended $200,000 in the mine alone. Our mill will be located two and one-half miles north of Hahns Peak, and will be connected with the mine by a 7,700-foot tramway. One carload of machinery is here and two more will arrive soon.

The Hahns Peak Gold Mining & Milling company, owning the mine, is composed of experienced mining men and money is ready for completion of the mill.

PROSPECTING FOR IRON ORE

During the last few years the United States Geological survey has received so many inquiries with regard to methods of prospecting for iron ore, that suggestions regarding prospecting for certain types of ore, such as hematite and limonite, have been published in an advance chapter on iron ore from "Mineral Resources of the United States for 1911," by Ernest P. Birchard, a copy of which may be obtained free on application to the director of the United States Geological survey at Washington, D. C.

Prospecting by pits, drills, and magnetic surveys is discussed, but owing to the variety of ores and to the differences in local conditions of climate, topography, geologic associations, and structure, the suggestions given are very general. It is hoped, however, that a few of the fundamental principles at least may be made clear.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The financial markets were quiet and uneventful. Loan reduction continues to be a feature of the weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks. The decrease in this item for the past week, making the statement of actual conditions, is 8 1/2 million, or $7,227,000, which brings the total contraction since the first of September close to $150,000,000. It had been anticipated that the contraction would be better shown in the item of cash than during the previous week, but Saturday's statement indicated a decrease of $2,749,000 in specie and legal tender, and a corresponding increase in deposits, owing to the reduction in cash, fell off $5,662,000, and this, by lessening reserve requirements, partially counteracted the cash loss. The 100 surplus above the 35 per cent minimum standing on Saturday at $6,765,100.

TREASURY REPORT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The condition of the United States treasury at the beginning of business today was:

Working balance, $2,782,251.
In bank and Philippine treasury, $32,073,101.
Total of general fund, $34,855,352.
Receipts yesterday, $3,125,488.
Disbursements, $2,183,438.
The deficit this fiscal year is $1,285,437, as against a deficit of $24,429,303 last year.

The figures for receipts, disbursements and deficit exclude Panama Canal and public debt transactions.

Finding Homes for Our Waifs

Former Happy-go-lucky Methods Invited Disaster—Sifting Processes Used as Safeguards—Trial Adoptions Now the Rule
—James P. Heaton

Only 38 homeless children out of the 5,000 minor wards of the commonwealth itself were legally adopted in Massachusetts last year. Over 25,000 youngsters are now in the various institutions, public and private, in New York state. Yet a great organization the official aim of which is "to find childless homes for homeless children and place homeless children in childless homes," brings about this combination in but about one hundred cases annually. This the association rightly considers a big successful year's work. These figures do not, of course include all the children for whom new homes were found in these two states, nor are all of these thousands technically eligible for adoption, but the fact is true that relatively few orphans find new parents.

In the face of this showing it is surprising to learn that the public and private institutions in many states receive more applications for the adoption of children than there are children to be adopted. Why is it then that in a few instances the homeless child and the childless home are brought together? The explanation is a sifting process applied to applicants and children alike.

The investigations begin with the child. First an extensive search is made to learn whether or not it has relatives of any reasonable degree of nearness who are financially able or morally fit to assume responsibility for its care.

Next its parentage is traced if it is possible. The progeny of degenerates, confirmed drunkards and grossly immoral persons are not offered for adoption. Likewise child who is defective mentally is not considered. Possibilities of hereditary taints of any kind are ferreted out even to the third or fourth generations. In addition the child's institutional record is carefully considered. Only then is he ready to be shown to his future father and mother.

THE FITNESS OF FOSTER PARENTS

Following this comes the delicate work of passing upon the fitness of those wishing to become foster parents. An agent usually visits the prospective home to see if it is clean and sanitary. References are required and neighbors consulted. Servants even are sometimes questioned to make sure that the man and his wife do not quarrel, for responsible agencies do not wish to give a child into the care of wrangling parents.

Even now the way is not yet cleared for Johnnie or Jenny to have a new, permanent home. Other steps still remain to be taken. Probably the request for a child—a girl is desired. Often the year's record shows that two girls are adopted for every boy. However that may be, the applicant usually specifies a child of a particular age, build or complexion. But in fact, this first preference is often forgotten. Wise superintendents allow for a change of mind. They show the applicant children of all kinds and often the man and woman who were determined to have a blonde go away well satisfied with a brunette.

When, finally, all these details have been settled the waif goes to its foster parents for the year of probation. With the best of intentions on both sides the relation may prove to be unwise owing to temperamental differences. Again fair promises are not always kept, especially if nature plays a trick and presents a childless couple with a baby of their own. Occasionally a couple find that the adopted child increases a latent propensity to wrangling or again the expense is too much, being greater than was anticipated. Usually, however, the probation period proves satisfactory to both sides.

Even though this is the case no thoughtful person will suggest that these precautions are superfluous. It is easier to adopt a child than to unadopt one. It may indeed be better for the child to live in a "free home" or "boarded home," for then the state or private society interested can interfere if undesirable developments take place. To consent to an adoption is always to take a certain risk. Important children's aid societies which have the oversight of a quarter of a thousand children sometimes arrange for but two or three adoptions a year.

THE OLD METHOD

Thirty or forty years ago the risks involved in the adoption of children were not so well understood, with the result that fewer safeguards were taken. Sometimes the field agent of some of the institutions of the larger cities picked out half a dozen or so of their charges and took them on visits to churches in the adjoining states, where with the children as exhibits he appealed for funds. If a hearer happened to take a fancy to one of the children, the boy or girl was left behind. It was not then so well realized that this happy-go-lucky method of placing children invited disaster. Many of the boys and girls removed by the various societies for the prevention of cruelty to children from unworthy homes are children who were parceled out for adoption by hit or miss methods. Often the blame for this belongs to the parents of the children who made no adequate inquiry concerning the people to whom they entrusted their offspring. Occasionally one still hears of London waifs who are sent over in batches and distributed to Canadian ranchmen with appalling celerity. Usually, however, in our larger cities the reputable agencies do not promote an adoption which does not bear all the earmarks of being a well-considered proposition.

Children who fail of adoption are "boarded out" in approved homes. For their care until they are 12 years old or so an allowance of about $3 a week is often made, although some are placed in "free homes." When they grow older the cash value of childhood complicates the situation, for there are people who wish to adopt children in order to exploit them as wage-earners. Often, however, the families taking children of this age are required to pay them a small wage for their work. As a result the Massachusetts superintendent of minor wards holds savings bank books with deposits amounting to $20,000 which belong to boys and girls of his family of 5,000. To the credit of human nature, however, most adoptions fall within the 12-year period when children have no commercial value.

The superintendents of some institutions declare that they cannot meet one-tenth of the applications they receive for a girl baby 2 years old. This is explained partly by the belief that little women are more easily trained in the niceties of deportment than their ruder brothers.

But chance, even after all investigations are made, largely determines whether a child is to remain in the care of a state or private institution, or whether some lonely couple moved by its personal appearance will eagerly offer to provide a new home and love.

Convicts, Not Rose Girls, Gather Milady's Flowers in French Guiana and Bulgaria from the Washington Star.

When milady thinks of all of the roses of the lovely scented perfume which she sprinkles judiciously on her hair and handkerchiefs she has visions of the French ladies on the sea around Grasse from Capri to the Gorges du Loup, or of their sister in the Valley of Roses in Bulgaria, gracefully gathering big bunches of red and pink blushing roses, throwing them into baskets, all while singing as they work, and doing, as with nymphlike movement, add their burden of roses to the tiny wagons.

It seems cruel to break this lovely scene. The more so, because it is true. In France, Bulgaria, and Germany, and in them is made the precious attar of roses, the essential ingredient of all perfumes. The rose, girls of the East do their share. But the little handkerchiefs, she knows, gathered the material which, committed by the convict hand, into that sweet odor. In the black forest of French Guiana it is gathered. And the hand brought it from those forests in the meantime, have been in death for the convicts there off rapidly.

A "roll of rosewood" extracted from a unique variety of rosewood found only in French Guiana is produced by seven factories now operating there. It is exported back to France, which last year received 100,000 worth of the oil, which is used as a substitute for and as an adulterant of attar of roses. It brings a little a pound, whereas the real attar of roses is vastly more expensive.

The French Guiana Colony, which has at the present time 8,000 convicts in her South American penal colony. Twice a year, the convict ships come from the mother country with its cargo of prisoners, safely secured in steel cages. The death rate among them is said to be terrible. The French government formerly sent many prisoners to New Caledonia, but most of them now go to French Guiana. About 2,000 a year are sent, but as many have died, the total is not as swelled as much as might be thought.

Many of these prisoners manage to escape through the forests to British and Dutch Guiana, despite the guards constantly on lookout for them. In Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, there are agents of a society formed in France of friends of the convicts, who provide them with money and further their efforts to escape.

As long as the convicts and the rosewood of French Guiana hold out, and there seems to be no immediate prospect that either will be exhausted, soon for the users of perfumes. There is no danger that a failure to harvest the Damascena rose crop in the Valley of Roses will produce a dearth of sweet-scented perfume for milady's boudoir and person. The convicts of French Guiana are strong-armed men and they have masters to goad them on, if need be, to fall more rosewood trees in the tropical jungles of South America. To men, even convicts, transferred from the delightful climate of France to the tropical heat of French Guiana, the change is hard to bear. It is but natural that they die off rapidly.

"Attar of roses is only one of several rose products used in the manufacture of perfumes," said a member of the trade the other day. "He made no mention, however, of oil of rosewood, although it is well known by many that this substitute is employed extensively. Attar of roses, also, is often adulterated, scented sandalwood and a fragrant Indian grass being among the substances used for this purpose."

Officials of the United States department of agriculture who have been experimenting in Washington this past summer as to the commercial possibilities of producing attar of roses in this country, were surprised when they were told of the "oil of rosewood" of French Guiana. A little investigation, however, soon convinced them that such a product was made there and shipped to France. They had seemed inclined to disbelieve the story by a traveler recently returned from South America that any such business as rosewood oil distillation existed. Excellent authority, however, was soon shown them.

The department's investigations into the matter of rose manufacture were made at the Arlington experiment station. There in various of roses, 600 bushes in all, were planted out, and the flowers carefully gathered as they opened. The total distillation of attar of rose from the many bushfuls of roses gathered in the valley of roses could be contained in a four-ounce bottle. The value of the genuine product is from $12 to $15 an ounce. The yield of the two qualities which are being sought for, and these would appear from the preliminary experiments to be best suited to the Rose damascena, the variety which grows in the Valley of Roses, Bulgaria. The

When George Washington Was King of Spades

PICTURE USED BY FRENCH TO ILLUSTRATE COURT CARDS

From the Kansas City Journal.

When the French cut off the head of Louis XVI and established a republic upon the monarchy, they took delight in wiping out all traces of royalty. One of their first acts was to abolish kings and queens from their playing cards. Off came the crowns, the scepters were changed to clubs or flowers; the cross was removed from the orb of empire, leaving this a mere ball. Says the Milwaukee Sentinel:

"The faces on the cards had in the beginning been rough attempts at portraits, these offering according to times and places. The most widely diffused cards were those made in Paris, and the most frequent designations for the kings were Charlemagne, Caesar, David and Alexander the Great; while the queens were sometimes famous queens of history, but more often heroines of whom Judith, Rachel, Argine and Pallas were the favorites, though Joanne d'Arc, Helen of Troy, Cleopatra and Blanche of Castile were almost equally popular. The Jacks were the pallid faces of Charlemagne or the leading peers of France, and the cards generally bore the names."

The revolutionists at first made no attempt to change the faces or the costumes, both of which had become conventional, though still closely resembling the ancient types, but as early as 1792 they substituted figures of sages for kings, virtues for queens and heroes for Jacks. Solon was "Sage of Hearts," Plato, "Sage of Clubs," Otto, "Sage of Diamonds," Brutus, "Sage of Spades." Justice, union, prudence and strength took the places of the queens of hearts, clubs, diamonds and spades respectively, as did Hannibal, Decius, Horace and Scævola for the Jacks.

There were many other variations of these revolutionary playing cards, but when Napoleon became emperor they were thrown into the discard and new devices with imperial faces and insignia ruled in their stead. At the restoration there was another new deal and the faces of French kings, queens and heroes reappeared.

At the fall of the second empire republicans were again "devised." Their inventors tried in each suit to symbolize one of the great republics of the world—the Roman, American, Swiss and French being those most usually selected. The symbolic figure of each republic became the queen of the suit. The great hero became the king, while the Jacks were secondary heroes, and the aces showed historic pictures.

It is from this time that dates the card in which the American republic was the spade suit and George Washington's portrait appeared in place of the king. This card is preserved in the collection of M. Henri Prost.

Another deck in which Washington figured was made up as follows: Hearts: King, Thiers; queen, the French republic; Jack, Etienne Marcel; ace, the assembly of the third estate. Clubs: King, George Washington; queen, the American republic; Jack, Lafayette; ace, Columbus discovering America. Diamonds: King, William Tell; queen, the Swiss republic; Jack, Melchior; ace, the oath of Gracety. Spades: Speedily returned to them.

The faces on the cards as we have them today date from the middle of the Seventeenth century, at which time the portraits were becoming conventionalized. The crude king of clubs, labeled "Alexander," is from a book dated 1690-1700, published in Paris and now in the possession of Henry d'Allemagne, author of a ponderous history of playing cards. It shows the face on the card but slightly different from that universally used today, and is one of the earliest examples of what was called the "Paris portrait," to differentiate it from the "London portrait," the face of the King, the Queen, the Jack, the Melchior, etc., portraits.

There has been much speculation about the origin of playing cards. There seems to be no doubt that they were invented in the East long before they were introduced into Europe. At the beginning of the fourteenth century traders with the Moors brought them either to Germany or to Italy, which is not certain. That they almost instantly became popular is attested by the earliest documentary mention we have of them, which is in a pastoral letter by the bishop of Wurzburg, dated 1329, forbidding the monks and nuns of his diocese to play cards.

Rose cultivation is the principal one raised in France.

Profitable Production Doubtful Here.

The department of agriculture experimenters were unwilling to make any definite statements as to whether rose growing for perfume purposes might be a commercial success in the United States. As yet their work has been scarcely begun, they declared, until they added that it might be three, four or five years before they would be ready to make any recommendation one way or the other in regard to the question.

Then experiments were started as a result of inquiries from florists, principally in California, as to what could be done in this line. The work has been in charge of Dr. Rodney C. True, who has supervision of drug plants, poisonous plant and tea culture investigations. The real work was done by Dr. Walter Van Fleet and Frank Rabak of the same division of the bureau of plant industry.

It was gathered, however, from what little could be learned concerning the Arlington farm experiments, that there was much doubt as to whether attar of rose production ever could be considered profitable as an industry in the United States. The knowledge of the use of rosewood for perfume purposes was added very considerably to this doubt. It was thought doubtful if any labor could be secured in this country which would do the picking clean enough. On this point it was thought possible that some ingenious sort of machine might be invented which would take the place to a large extent of the human element in picking. A machine is now used on the government tea farm near Summerville, S. C., which gathers the tea so that no human hand need ever touch it. Before this was invented it was said that the colored children could pick the tea so fast that you could scarcely see their arms move. The trained children could gather from six to ten times as much as the amateurs. How long on a stretch they kept it up was not stated.

The fact that convicts in South America gather rosewood trees, whence comes much of the perfume the world uses, will not diminish its eternal use. Ever since the days when Aphrodite anointed the body of Hector with rose oil, and even long before that and previous to the annual rose festival of the Greeks and Romans, on which occasion they anointed the tombs of their ancestors with rose oil, perfume of many degrees of fragrance has been used.

Use of Perfumes and Effects.

Paris has just announced the latest fad in this direction. A French actress is the inventor of the new method, which consists of injecting perfume under the skin. A slight prick in the arm, and for the following thirty-six hours the lady waits with an atmosphere of demure rose, of delicate violet, of piercing tuberoses of delicious heliotrope or of old lavender. The injection, it is said, leaves absolutely no mark. After its administration for a day and a half in spite of an ocean dip or vigorous exercise, many persons in the past, especially among the French, have tried to surround themselves with peculiar individual fragrance, but the means have been more or less crude. The latest fad may solve the problem for them.

Another ingenious method which milady of fashion has found of carrying about with her unseen springs of perfume, is by means of a hairpin, which, when pressed lightly, emits a shower of perfume. Touching her hair gently, apparently to arrange a stray lock, the knowing one is freshening the sweet odor which was beginning to fade.

The various effects of different kinds of perfume is well known, although it could scarcely be said that a strict scientific study ever has been made of the subject. The people of the Orient know much more of perfumes and their physiological effect upon the senses than do the occidentals. Perfumes can elevate the soul, hence their use in temples; they can divert the mind, wherefore magicians and sorcerers use them to distract the attention; they aid in gaining appreciation of the esthetic for which reason some art dealers have surrounded their beautiful paintings with an atmosphere of sweet smell. Woman finds it a powerful adjunct in winning and holding the attention of her admirer.

In surgery the influence of perfume as an aid in administering anesthetics is long recognized, and has been successfully used in several cases. Its use in this line is bound to spread, for the chief dread of ether has been the sickening odor. By mixing it with an alkali of orange peel, a pleasant odor, it is said, is given.

Perfumes may have their baneful effect, too. This has been pointed out very recently by Dr. Hudson Maxxim, who has made some investigations as to the physiological effect of different odors. He declares that perfumes on the whole are highly obnoxious to him. The liking for perfumes he has found is by no means universal. Many persons dislike perfumes exceedingly and are rendered ill by them, he discovered. He expressed the opinion that many women afflicted with neurasthenia and hysteria owe their condition largely to self-poisoning with perfumes. He calls attention also to the fact that an odor may be very pleasant and at the same time be poisonous, as with benzoin, used in many paint and varnish removers. A good whiff of a tuberoses, he says, will give him a headache. The smell of roseol and of some other substances intoxicates some people, he says.

Meanwhile, milady say continues to indicate those about her with attar of roses, whether gathered by rose girls in France or by French convicts in South America.

It is assured that they will be in charge of the Japan Art company. The first glimpse of the empress will be when she appears, garbed in a delicately tinted silken kimono, her winsome face partly concealed by a sheer white veil, seated in her royal "kago," her traveling chair.

The choruses in this pretty extravaganza are many and varied, the cast numbers over 100, the music is charming and the costumes most of them imported. Among the attractive choruses is that of the Colon Girls, who will appear in a dance of sparkling gaiety, gowned in the color of coral, black and gold, the 50 girls in bright kimono with fluttering fans and tiny mirrors, the helms and beaus in evening costumes, the parasols girls in fluffy white with parasols of brilliant crimson, etc. Specialty acts which are really splendid will be introduced by Mr. Sam Baker and the college quartet, Mr. Joseph Underwood in Klites in an inimitable presentation of Harry Lauder's famous Scotch songs, Miss Floy Sisco in a dainty solo dance and Miss Eleanor Thomas whose singing is always a delight.

"Altogether it promises to be a perfectly fine performance, and will be quite 'the thing' Thursday evening. The college people are planning to celebrate their victory, the club women to support their undertaking and society to pleasantly while away a couple of hours after the many elaborate dinner parties.

WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

"The Isle of Dreams"

Among the prettiest of customs of old Japan is that of giving a great chrysanthemum party in November, the month when the Imperial flower is in its perfection. The festival is held in the Royal palace grounds, where the mighty emperor and beautiful empress receive their many guests.

This royal chrysanthemum festival is to be depicted in all of its oriental splendor on Thanksgiving night at the Grand opera house, and Colorado Springs society has been invited to attend. That the decorations will indeed be in keeping with the occasion

Young Women's Christian association was held Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the association rooms in the DeCraff building. Two hundred and fifty members were seated at the 42 long tables which were beautifully decorated, quantities of lovely flowers and ferns which were so kindly sent for the occasion by the Pike Peak Floral company, and Gramps, were used in a charming manner by Mrs. T. C. Kirkwood, who decorated the tables. The guest table, over which Miss Ellen T. Brimley presided, bore an exquisite centerpiece of Richmond roses and ferns, and was lighted by the warm glow of candles in crystal sticks with lovely red shades. Seated at this table were: Miss Brimley, the president, Mr. Nicholas Van der Arend, the speaker of the evening, and the one man present at the banquet, Mrs. Goddard, Mrs. William C. Robinson, Mrs. William Strickland, Miss Kate Kinney of Denver, Mrs. Susan of Denver, Miss Hathway and Miss McMillan.

The other tables were just as attractively adorned, some with red and white roses and other with pink carnations. The little party was a unique and very pretty affair, hand-painted by Miss Jeanette Scholz in mountain kimonos.

After the coffee and fruit, Miss Brimley gave a short talk, introducing Miss Inez Kinney of Denver as "the bishop of the west-central territory of the Y. W. C. A." Miss Kinney spoke in an interesting manner of her work and the work of the Y. W. C. A. in this territory. She closed by inviting the members to attend the summer camp at Estes park next summer, August 10 to 20.

Mr. Van der Arend then made a splendid address on the new building, explaining, with the aid of plans and finished, the home as it will be when finished. Mrs. Louis Hudson Allen then gave a most cleverly illustrated story by Miss Ruth Benson of the Y. W. C. A. Alphabet. Miss Benson paraphrased the letters to mean, "Your Work Counts Amazingly." "You Will Cultivate." "Accomplishment." and "You, We'll Come Again," and spoke on each.

Miss McCulloch, the general secretary, closed the program with some splendid suggestions as to the association's work in the future and its possibilities. The musical numbers, which were given during the "nightingale" were very delightful. Miss Winifred Fairley sang three of MacDowell's songs, and a chorus of ballads. Miss Ruth Benson, Miss Maggie Reed, Proctor, Miss Carolyn Swenson, Miss Judith Mann, Miss Ruth Campbell, Miss Bertha Arnold, Miss Grace Duncan, under the direction of Miss Anna Briggs, sang the "Barcarolle" from "The Love Tales of Hoffman." The "Little Grasshopper" by Jessie Gayner, and the "Berceuse" from Jocelyn, by Godard.

The banquet was a very great success, and the girls will look forward eagerly to the one next year. That it affords a great success is due to the efforts of Mr. W. W. Williamson and Mrs. E. K. De la Vergne, chairman of the banquet committee. Miss Jeanette Scholz, chairman of the serving committee, and Mrs. T. C. Kirkwood, chairman of the decorating committee.

Wardner Williams Addresses D. A. R.

Mr. Wardner Williams of Denver, president of the National Statesman-ship league and of the Denver Patriotic league, was the speaker of the afternoon last Monday at a very interesting meeting of the American Revolution, held at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Cass Goddard, 908 North Cascade avenue. The special guests of the afternoon were members of the societies of Colonial Dames and of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Mr. Williams' splendid address was on the subject of "The American Navy." Mrs. Freeman C. Rogers of Pueblo, state regent of the D. A. R., then made a short address. Arthur Farwell's famous hymn, "Liberty" was sung by a double quartet composed of:

Steele Parent-Teacher Association.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Steele school had a most interesting and profitable meeting last Wednesday afternoon at the school building. Miss Charlotte Learning, teacher of arts and crafts at the High school, gave the second address in the study of modern methods of child training, taking for her subject "The Order of Art Training in Elementary and High Schools." Miss Ethel Hall, who is considered the most successful teacher of reading in the city, demonstrated her method of teaching children this important subject. Pupils of the school furnished music to conclude the program.

The Portia Club.

The Portia club held another of its extremely interesting meetings last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Owen Dodge, 109 East Willamette avenue. In addition to very attractive menus of Thanksgiving dinners for six, to cost no more than $5, given by five of the club members, Mrs. Scholz, Mrs. Denney, Mrs. Fertig, Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Dodge, the president of the club, Mrs. Goddard, gave a most interesting description of a real old New England Thanksgiving dinner.

At the OPERA

DRAWINGS BY LESLIE WILSON

PHOTOGRAPHS

LAST year almost every gown worn at the opera was enriched and beautified by lovely and elaborate embroideries. This year the glory of the evening gown lies in the fondness and rich material of which it is made.

Has there yet been a time when the materials of the evening dresses were as frankly beautiful and lustrous as they are today? The dressmaker at the present time is an artist.

down in the form of paniers still holds the place of honor as regards evening attire, but the draping must be as perfect as though the material had been poured out in liquid form and run into natural grooves and ridges, while the modern note is to catch up the overdress in the center of the back with a giant hook and eye made of closely matted diamonds or glittering jet. Many of the gowns which are not draped on the corsage in Grecian fashion show a return to the elegant "bertha" of lace or net. Time was when no evening dress was complete without this touch and there is no denying that it represents one of the simplest methods of treatment imaginable, with the exception of the fitch, to which it is a decided rival.

Charming frock in the straight, uncorseted figure effect, the high waist line and the clinging front are especially smart, too, for youthful figures.

Beads again play an important part in evening gowns. The model pictured is in purple velvet brocade with pearl gray overdress of tulle beaded in white.

These lace "berthas" outline the décolletage very softly and prettily and bury the sleeves beneath their folds, making a very youthful and dainty little corsage, while those who own some treasure of a lace flounce for which they have not yet found a use could hardly turn it to better account than in this guise. The less fortunate woman contents herself with the beautiful shadow lace which is used so extensively nowadays in a pale parchment or coffee tint and a "bertha" of this would be ideal allied to a three tiered skirt likewise made of lace flounces over accordion pleated net veiling satin.

Accordion net is wonderfully attractive for girl's dresses, the more luxurious materials being, of course, more or less reserved for their elders. There are lovely little gowns, too, simply made of accordion or gauffered pearl white chiffon, into which is spliced a panel of shadow lace, likewise pleated to match. No other trimming but the lace is required, unless it be the heavy silver or gold bullion fringe which so many dressmakers employ as a finish to the soft swathed satin belts.

New Tunic a Fashion for Fem.

The sleeves of evening gowns have lost their identity in the draperies that go over the shoulders. Sometimes they are composed of the smallest string of brilliants over the shoulder. On afternoon gowns, waists, and a few evening gowns they are long, lace frilled, and show increased fullness.

For richness of material, the afternoon gown is as remarkable as the evening toilette.

Every woman has her velvet or plush gown, just as she has her velvet or plush hat for the coming winter season. Even the chaste evening frocks in some instances have a kind of plush surface which brings them into line with the prevailing vogue.

White velvet frocks are a costly fancy, but their popularity is not to be exaggerated. Their snowy surface is thrown into startling relief by the black fox or skunk rollings that adorn them, and though the new method is in some cases to put the band at the foot, in others it is used as a leash to produce the peg top look that characterizes the new silhouette.

The fur in such a case plays the rôle formerly assumed by the ribbon sash, supporting, catching up, and obscuring the draperies of the skirt.

Back Gives No Clue to Front.

The intricacies of which the tunic is capable in its latest developments make it the admiration of those who understand the subtleties of dress and the despair of those who have not acquired a thorough mastery of the art of dealing with draperies skillfully and successfully. The new tunic is, therefore, a fashion for the few instead of for millions.

There is no telling by the front of a frock this season what one may reasonably expect to find in the back. Nor, for that matter, does the back of the average frock give any clue to the front.

Such odd things are done with scale and draperies and plaits and collars and coatfalls and trains and girdles that the only way to get any definite idea of a frock is to walk all the way around it and in many cases the revelations are interesting enough to pay one for the trouble.

Trains, for example, may start from shoulders or high girdle top of normal waist line or may be merely a continuation of side draperies drawn softly back and knotted low. They are perhaps more often pointed than rounded or square, yet both rounded and pointed trains are seen and there seems to be a feeling that they are gaining upon the pointed lines.

Pofret has effective little square trains upon some of his models, the train falling free from the underskirt and trimmed across its end by a wide band of fur, while tulle front draperies are carried back to be draped along the sides of the train and end in great soft bows near its end.

A narrow square train on a Worth model is of black and gold brocade and hangs loose from the underskirt. Down each side it is faced with shell pink velvet to a depth of six inches and toward the end of pink velvet turns over upon the outside of the train in what may perhaps be best described as long revers.

Drecolf in one of his beaded chiffon evening gowns uses a very sharply pointed train of the clinging thickly beaded chiffon, but borders it all around with a foot wide band of selva edge plain chiffon.

Brocades Are High Priced.

Trains run off oddly at one side or another, though the side train is less often seen than it was last winter, and there are innumerable interesting draperies associated with trains.

One very simple treatment of plain satin or velvet

Stunning frock in flame colored velvet. Its simple, cleverly handled drapery lines and its touches of bead embroidery make it an exceedingly striking and handsome model.

One finds a good deal of vivid color in season's show used both in relieving notes for whole frocks or parts of frocks. The butte dress shows this drawing the vivid yellow with touches of black.

Wrap of brocaded velvet, chiffon and The matter of collars on evening coats receive careful attention, for often it collar finish that sets the smart stamp wrap.

is to use a breadth of the material flatly, starting it at the shoulders or girdle top and looping it up twice still flatly—in the course of its length.

The Arabian Night's dream of the designers and manufacturers has found expression in stuffs peculiarly adapted to the luxurious evening coat. In such a garment, provided one does not have to be practical, one can dare a little more than in a frock that must be worn all through an evening and for many more evenings.

Appearances in evening coats are always fugitive sketchy. The watching crowd gets a fleeting impression only and a fleeting impression may well hold a limit of the gorgeous.

For several years both manufacturers and dressmakers have been urging the merits of but women turned deaf ears for a time, and year this vogue of brocades grew only slowly, waiting evidently determined to carry the result and launched such bewilderingly beautiful brocades that it was not in vain to withstand them.

To many of these brocades are attached are prohibitive to the crowd and yet it is to find how many women will have them and do have them in spite of the high price.

As she shakes out the waxen folds of the soft and beautiful fabrics out of which she will evolve "such things as dreams are made of," she realizes at once that such a gown needs no elaborate embroideries or trails of roses and lilies, but that a touch of lace and a single line of brilliant outlining—the décolletage like a tiny rivulet of fire will be all sufficient.

Of all the different descriptions of velvet, satins, and brocades with which the busy workrooms of the really expert couturière is full, perhaps the most attractive of all is a wonderfully soft material with a groundwork of crepe de chine and a close wallpaper design of embossed velvet almost covering the surface.

The "train" of the moment is to possess a gown of this carried out in pure white and hemmed at the foot with a strip of black fox, while the magpie effect is still further accentuated by a filmy veiling or the very finest black tulle illusion, which almost covers the corsage and forms the waist belt cascading down the back over the jupe. This is relieved at the décolletage by a sparkling line of mock diamonds, and by the huge saffron velvet or deep crimson rose which catches a handful of folds at the waist.

There are not a few dressmakers who would hardly dream of completing their evening frock without this supplementary touch, the great tea or cabbage rose in some vivid tone of color which breaks the monotony of the all black and white gown and gives a finish to these lovely and luxurious creations having entirely superseded the little tightly packed bunch of berries and blossom.

Every Evening Gown Has Train.

Every evening gown nowadays has a train and nearly always this is pointed, little to the center. The overdress which is drawn away on either side very low

A Charming Decoration for a Blouse

This design might be embroidered upon chiffon or other sheer material as trimming for a dressy waist; or embroidered upon the waist itself. A soft silk in some shade of blue, with the embroidery carried out in subdued Oriental colors as with jewels for the centers of the flowers, if desired, would give a good effect.

The double edge should be either satin stitch or buttonholing. The stems and long lines may be outline or French stem stitch. The pointed pieces and petals of the flowers may be solid or outlined and filled in with darning stitch, beading or French knots. The blouse, as designed, should have a net or lace yoke and cuffs.

If carried out in all white upon suitable material, the large open spaces may be done in punch work.

CHARACTER as well as utility is embodied in the newest pin-cushions which come in the shape of figurines artistically garbed. Most of all interesting is the American Girl. She is not represented as a business woman or as a militant Suffragette, but as a Dresden china type of beauty, arrayed daintily in pale pink and blue warp-printed sash ribbon, seated on a pile of blue ribbon cushions decorated with pink bows. Her devoted admirer, the American Boy, gazes at her from the wall, for he is a hanging cushion-doll, dressed as no flesh and blood Yankee lad would ever consent to be, in old rose and white satin trimmed with gold braid.

A pin-cushion which has made a great hit in France and England and is certain to win admirers in America, is the china doll wearing a Seventeenth Century frock of warp-printed sash ribbon, belted with a lace apron equipped with purple pockets. Equally popular are the shepherdess doll-cushions garbed in white or pink or blue satin belted with silk petticoats or with chiffon hand-painted in a floral design.

PHOTOGRAPH FRAME

DO NOT wear your brains to a frazzle wondering what sort of favors to provide for your party because every man and woman has a collection of photographs which need to be framed and will be charmed to get whatever is provided for that purpose. If you're of the fortunate few who need not pause to consider expense, buy frames of metal encrusted with rhinestones, fresh water pearls or mother-of-pearl. Or the gold ones decorated with chasing or carving in case they're to be jeweled. But if obliged to think twice before ordering the requisite number of frames, you might select the very unusual-looking novelties in real ivory luted with colored stones or of Parisian ivory hand-painted or gold or silver lased. Even less expensive are the small-sized ever-frames of heart, spade or club shape. However, if your purse is really slender, you would best turn to the bestry-covered frames which are very pretty indeed, and to the exceptionally attractive looking as well as substantial affairs which come in a variety of shades.

Valuable Household Hints.

Before creaming butter and sugar, stir the bowl in the oven or fill it with hot water, empty and wipe dry. This expedites the process, and the butter is not so great as to melt the bowl. The danger that is in it the butter first warmed in the oven.

MENDING BAGS

SILKS embroidered with Chinese designs in colors, threaded with gold, are not considered too costly a material of which to fashion the homely mending bag that is left apparently forgotten—lying on the living room table. These bags are made over celluloid embroidery rings and to them are attached bracelet handles of plaited gold or silver, or rhinestone-encrusted metal, or mother-of-pearl, or coral or of jade.

Silk tapestry is the very attractive material employed for mending bags shaped at the top with an oval hoop and provided with a black satin draw string. In similar style are mending bags of orange, Indian red, nut brown, old blue or tan satin decorated with a massive floral design in applique or with a hand-embroidered bird of paradise or a flock of butterflies. Shaped like a quaint old-fashioned Southern carpet bag is the mending receptacle of heavy tapestry linen bearing a floral design in tan, red or green, lined to match the embroidery. Provided with a bottom of heavy cardboard and two ribbon-covered handles, the least attractive of the new mending bags is a model made of heavy natural linen embroidered in an Oriental color design showing an artistic blending of blue, tan, white, green, red and black and equipped with a blue ribbon handle. Each bag should contain a complete sewing outfit in addition to darning utensils.

Chenille Fringe.

With the many old-fashioned materials we are adopting nowadays we may reckon chenille fringe. Of this there is a quantity in evidence, and it plays many parts in the scheme. In its most important role it forms the border to our sashes, but it is used as a hat trimming as well, and seems suited to the new plush models. A hat in tete de nègre plush had a bunch of rather long chenille fringe fixed on one side of the hat and drooping over it with good effect.

THE FINISHED BLOUSE

THE CUFF

Miss Norris' Answers to Correspondents

MRS. W. W. Very attractive curtains can be made of the muslin and a very pretty and unusual way to finish a muslin curtain, intended for either a bedroom or dining-room is by means of a very deep scallop.

In each scallop work a cluster of dots in the prevailing color of your room and the result will be very effective. If the scalloping of these curtains would seem a task, cut the scallops, turn up the raw edge and cover with a lace braid. In this way the edge will be quickly made, and after the cluster of dots are embroidered in each scallop, you will have a very pretty pair of curtains.

In measuring for the curtains, you would have to allow for the turned up edge of the deep scallops.

Macrame Crochet Cord.

MRS. F. L. Macrame crocheted cord can be purchased in any store where all macrame supplies are sold. Number 20 would be best for the color. The cord is sold on spools at twenty-five cents each. Addresses cannot be given through the columns of the paper.

Baby Cap.

MRS. Y. G. A. White baby cap may be made of either sheer linen or lawn, but must have a padded lining of lamb's wool.

China silk can also be used if it is lined and the little caps with embroidered turn-back flaps are in very good style.

If the cap is made of linen or lawn, the embroidery can be either eyelet or punch work or any open embroidery, but if China silk is used, the embroidery should be solid work in some dainty floral design.

Waist Design.

MRS. C. W. The wild carrot waist pattern which can either be done in eyelet or solid work was published March 6, 1910. Am very glad indeed that you found the design so lovely after it had been embroidered.

Dutch Collar.

MRS. E. D. As a Dutch collar was given so recently, another could not be published for some time.

The scalloped edge of the sets which have been given could be used and if you do not wish an embroidery design, omit it, merely transferring the scalloped edge. The edge of the collar published September 1, 1912, would be very nice for your purpose.

To embroidered the scallops in some harmonizing or agreeable contrasting color would be more effective for a girl's suit than the all white.

Am delighted that the patterns have been helpful to you and hope you will continue to find serviceable designs among them.

Directions for Lace.

MRS. D. The illustration was made especially plain, and as the design is not difficult, directions were not deemed necessary.

Am very sorry indeed to disappoint you, but anyone familiar with crocheting will be able to help you make the lace from the illustrations.

Baby Shoes.

MRS. W. V. A pair of baby shoes, which would be especially nice for winter, can be made of chamolite skin. Trace any embroidery pattern on the little shoes and burn the design with a pyrographic needle, taking care that the point is not too hot.

If you do not care for the burnt design, outline the pattern with silk, and the effect will be very good. When embroidering, do not stretch the chamolite.

After the decoration is finished, overcast the sides and soles together and you will have a very pretty pair of baby shoes.

Moccasins for the little tots can also be made in this way, and tops of old chamolite gloves can often be utilized for these little shoes and moccasins.

Tea Napkin.

MRS. H. A luncheon or tea napkin design with scalloped edge was published November 12, 1911. All out-of-date editions must be ordered from the Circulation Department of the paper.

Hardanger Counterpane.

MRS. C. A very beautiful bedspread may be of either serim or congress canvas, decorated with squares of Hardanger embroidery.

A border of small squares, which should be placed, so as to lie on the bed, allowing for a design of larger squares in the center would give a very beautiful effect.

The canvas or serim can be fringed and a fringed edge would add very much to the attractiveness of this spread.

As the work is done by counting the threads, the patterns are of geometrical precision and any black pattern could be used.

All white is always in good taste and for an elaborate piece, such as a bed spread is perhaps best to use. You could, however, use blue flax for the working and the counterpane would look particularly nice in a blue and white room, but the colors must be fast-dye, or your work would be for naught.

PLAYHOUSE

A SCENE FROM "THE CONFESSION," AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE, TWO DAYS, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29 AND 30. MATINEE, SATURDAY.

"The Confession"

GRAND OPERA HOUSE, TWO DAYS

"The Confession," a new drama from the Bijou Theater, Broadway, New York, will be the offering at Grand Opera House, two days, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29 and 30.

The play is a four-act drama, written by James H. H. Reid and is one of the strongest plays seen here this season. The cast is made up of professional actors of exceptional ability.

The plot consists of a priest's brother accused of murder which another brother has committed and confessed to the priest, knowing that the priest is not impart the knowledge. The priest is only saved by the dying confession of the true murderer at the last moment to the governor.

Very strong scenes are enacted, but the conclusion of the third act in the true hill has been found in the prisoner and the real murderer, a French Canadian, escapes, is the most pathetic.

George "Honey Boy" Evans Coming

George "Honey Boy" Evans, the diminutive paragon of minstrelsy, and his superb company of blackface favorites, will present a edition de luxe of the old-time minstrel show at the Grand Opera House in the near future.

Marvelous scenic embellishments, gorgeous wardrobes and spectacular light effects are promised as among the leading features of this attraction, which this year is new in its entirety.

"The Moral Power," the opening part, is described as a series of exquisite beauty. Seated in the usual semicircle, with Vaughn Comfort, presiding as interlocutor, it presents the following minstrel favorites: "Comedians, John King, Sam Lee, Jack Kennedy, Raymond Maxson and Tommy Hyde; singers, James Meehan, Jim Doherty, Joseph Gillespie, Thomas Richards, Carl Bial, Jack Foley, Lew Weed and John Alexander. Old-time melodies and popular songs of the present, among the latter being the big hit of the Friars' Frolic, "I Want to Hear an Irish Band Play on St. Patrick's Day," are rendered during this division.

"Seminary Days," a singing and dancing novelty by James E. Gorman, stage manager for all Cohen and Harris productions, is the second part, and shows the moonlight illuminated campus and buildings of a girl's seminary in the southland. The contingent of dancers, as dusky belles and sportive darky beauties, are given splendid opportunity for clever satirical exhibitions. It introduces John King, the incomparable wench-delineator, and Sam Lee, the personator of a "No account nigger." "The Boys We Love" and "When the Old Town Clock Strikes Nine," both written by the "Honey Boy," are his songs.

After the "Honey Boy" regales his auditory with his delectable monologue and Tommy Hyde, the world's premier soft-shoe dancer, assisted by Johnny Barry, gives a clever dancing exhibition, the show is brought to a close with the pretentious afterpiece, "Do Go Lightly Guards" reception. Its book, lyrics and music were written by the inimitable Evans who, in his favorite characterization of a roustabout dandy of the levee, stirs up a maelstrom of mirth. Its scenes are laid in Hamtown, Ala. An elaborate ensemble march is one of its features, and among its pleasing song selections are "Do Go Lightly Guards" and "The Daughter of the Regiment," the latter being rendered by Charles Hilliard, the clever and refined impersonator of the girlkind. Evans appears as "Cicero Didimus Jones" and "General Wood Wolf."

Frank Beal is preparing for vaudeville the one-act burlesque on Eugene Walter's "The Feathers," now current at the Cort, Chicago. The title of the satire is "Nine Feathers" and was written by Fred Donaghey as a curtain raiser for "The Girl at the Gate." It was tried out in Detroit when that place opened, and according to reports, was a big hit. Beal is negotiating for a week at the Majestic, Chicago, with the travesty, which carries a cast of five.

Carnegie Alaska-Siberia Motion Pictures AT THE PRINCESS

The forthcoming engagement of the Alaska-Siberia pictures at the Princess Theater, tomorrow and Tuesday, has aroused keen interest among local playgoers. These remarkable films have gained the approval of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other large centers where they have been exhibited. About a year ago the directors of the Carnegie Museum of Pittsburgh decided to send out a party of scientists and naturalists to Alaska and Siberia to secure specimens of the fauna of those countries. To head this expedition they selected Captain P. E. Kleinschmidt, a noted big game hunter and explorer who had spent fifteen years in the Arctic region. The captain insisted that a complete motion picture taking outfit be included with the camp and scientific paraphernalia, and as a result he was able to secure a pictorial record of the trip, which greatly enhanced, in point of public interest, the specimens of bird and animal life and scientific data procured for the museum. Two hours of wholesome entertainment is furnished by the wonderful pictures which graphically show the chase and capture of the moose, mountain sheep, seal, sea lion, walrus and polar bear by the members of the expedition and Eskimos. Scenes showing Eskimo life in the villages and in their aquatic sports have proven of great interest. These pictures come here direct from their record breaking business and run at the Broadway theater in Denver. Professor G. E. Havens, one of Capt. Kleinschmidt's aides on the expedition, lectures at every performance.

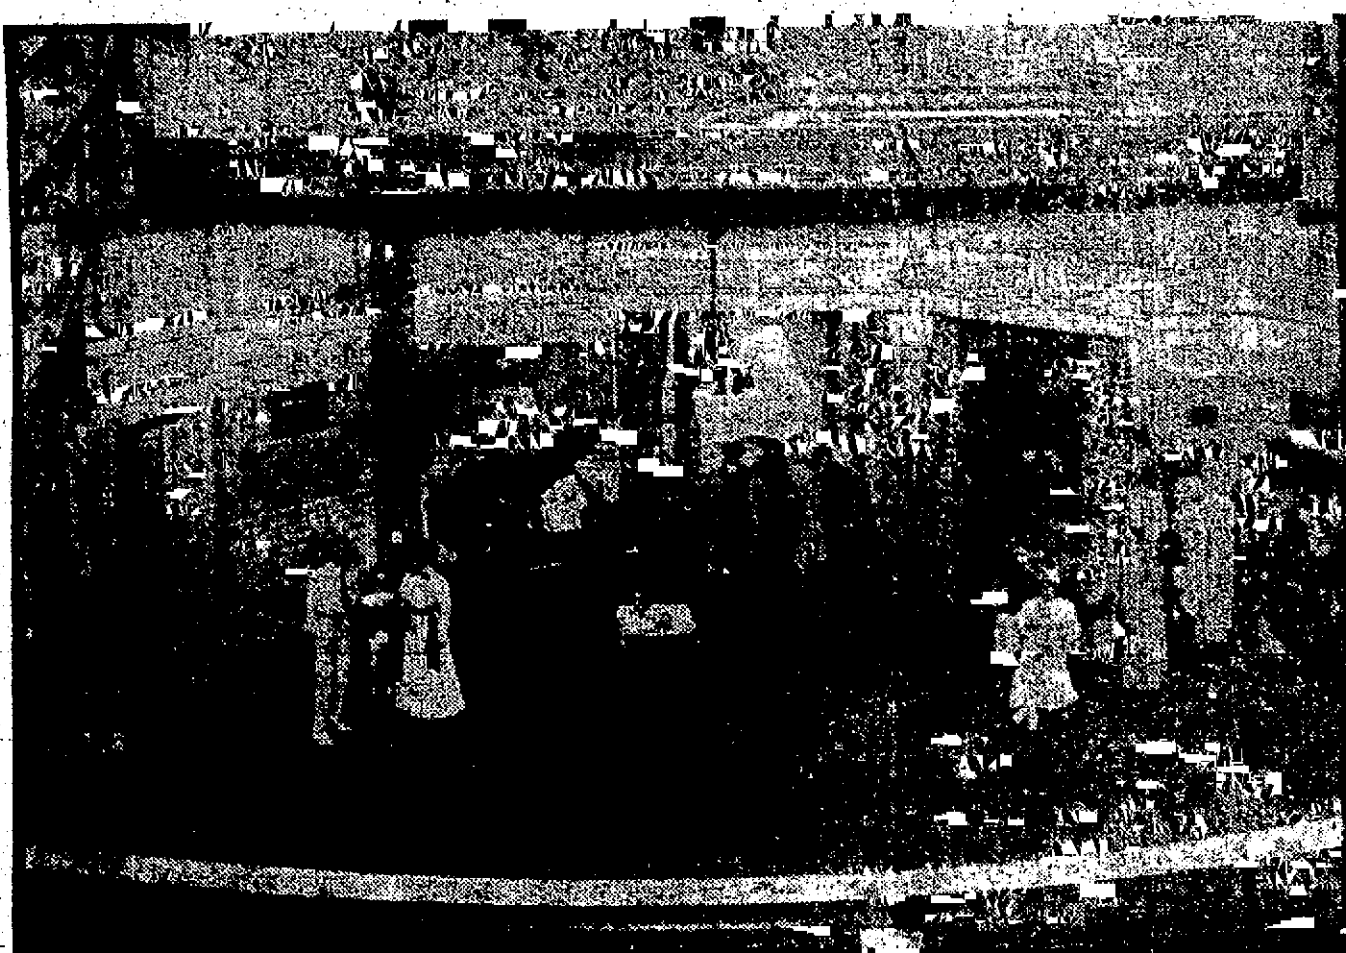

First time at popular prices. Denver, Colo., Oct. 3, 1912. To whom it may concern:

As a member of the board of education of the City and County of Denver, it gives me great pleasure to recommend to the public, and especially to all school children in the state, the Alaska-Siberia motion pictures.

These pictures, for the past three weeks, have been on exhibition at the Broadway theater in this city and have been duly attended by the public and have afforded the children of our city an opportunity to see these remarkable pictures which were so realistic that one could feel that they had almost been on the Alaska-Siberia expedition in the Polar regions. From an educational standpoint they are the best pictures and most instructive that have ever been produced and they are especially adaptable from an educational standpoint because they show the exact and realistic situation of Alaska and Siberia. These pictures have been especially approved by the board of education of this city. The representatives of these pictures are high-class business men and thoroughly reliable.

Very truly yours,
JOHN W. GILLESPIE, Supt.
W. A. E. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

Example of Stage Setting at 'The Burns'

More than once in our news and criticisms we have had occasion to mention the perfection in style and color of the stage settings at The Burns theater.

From an artistic point of view they have left nothing to be desired. The reproduction given on this page is one of the settings used in "Speed" last week and it is a fair example of what they have been doing all the season, and well established the claim of The Burns that their settings are not only equal to the best road productions but are fully equal to any New York settings. Very close attention is given to details in regard to the small utensils and ornamentalations used in the different acts to have them absolutely accurate and up-to-date. When this is combined with careful grouping and the setting of the best of furniture, together with suitable scenery, the ensemble produces a perfect picture which is a lesson to anyone on household decoration.

We only regret that we are not able to reproduce the above scene from "Speed" in at the same time reproduce the color scheme.

Note: In consequence of the Burns' concert on Monday night, the first performance of "At Cozy Corners" will be given on Tuesday night. The greatest of pains are being taken to give this rural comedy a thoroughly suitable setting. It is in a large measure appropriate to the Thanksgiving season and we trust will receive the patronage that it deserves.

The Burns management take pleasure in stating that arrangements have been completed with Mr. William Link to give a musical program especially adapted to Thanksgiving. After the splendid music which this orchestra has rendered during the past season, the public may rest assured that The Burns program for Thanksgiving week will include musical numbers which will be a high class concert in themselves.

There will be two matinees this coming week, one on Thanksgiving and one on Saturday—remember the opening night is Tuesday. The play will be presented in perfect style, every actor being already word-perfect.

"At Cozy Corners" THE BURNS THIS WEEK

"At Cozy Corners," the bill for the coming week at The Burns, commencing Tuesday, November 25, is a rural comedy drama in four acts by Pauline Phelps and Marion Short.

It is recognized as one of the best modern rural plays, having a strong dramatic story and all the comedy elements which are always so plentiful in rural plays.

The first rural comedy of the season at The Burns, "Our New Minister," proved so successful that Mr. Hawkins at once decided to present another, and decided on "At Cozy Corners," as the best available rural comedy drama.

Mr. Arnold will again appear as the minister, a character in which he was so well received in "Our New Minister." The part is an entirely different one, and offers excellent opportunity. Miss Wayne will be seen as Avis Merrill, a young violinist, who is trying to have a short vacation away from the glare of the footlights and the admiration of the public and press. Florence Hart will have the best character comedy opportunity she has had this season in the part of Amanda, the hired girl, who only works out for accommodation. Mr. Cross will enact the role of Mark Grandy, the manager of the violinist. Miss Ferguson will be seen as Mrs. Deacon Bartlett; Mr. Gardner, as Deacon Pettibone; Ross Birchett, as the much-in-love country boy, and the remainder of The Burns players equally well cast, so that the public may look forward to a production and a play really worth while and, withal, seasonable, and great music for this occasion.

Something About "At Cozy Corners."

Avis Merrill, who in public life is Claudia, the violinist, is vacationing at the little village of Cozy Corners, and is very much admired by all the town boys, the minister included. Her manager, Mark Grandy, comes with her contracts for a tour of Europe for the following season. She weighs carefully the European tour, and the thought of being a minister's wife, and readily decides in favor of the minister. A lapse of a few months finds her comfortably installed in the minister's house, when her manager returns and, through scheming and trickery, brings about a separation between the minister and his wife. She goes back to the old life of the footlights, but it soon develops that she only did it to

The players, in order of their first appearance:

Mrs. Deacon Bartlett, a prominent church worker, Minnie L. Ferguson; Bob Bartlett, her son, Ross Birchett; Sophie Anderson, a young woman of Cozy Corners, Claudia White; Deacon Pettibone, a member of the church board, Earle M. Gardner; Clyde Hollister, the minister, Almsworth; Arnold; Avis Merrill, a violinist, Justina Wayne; Mark Grandy, her manager, Mr. Cross; Amanda, the minister's hired girl, Florence Hart; Riggs, the janitor, Lloyd Mitchell.

Act I—Grounds of the Cozy Corners Congregational church, summer.

Act II—Dining room of the parsonage, February of the following year.

Act III—Interior of the Congregational church, later the same evening.

Act IV—Same as Act II. Afternoon of the following May.

Time—The present.

Place—Cozy Corners.

THE BURNS

Those heard in "Manon Lescaut" were: Carolina White, Mr. Zenatelli, Mr. Sammarco, Miss Ruby Hoyt, Mr. Warnery and Mr. Tevisson.

A few short months have made an enormous difference in the artistic growth of Carolina White. Never has she portrayed a character so well suited to her personality, and incidentally it may be said to her beauty. As for her singing it was fascinating in its appeal, no matter in what phase, whether as the coquette or in the death scene which surely has never been done with such powerful appeal and it raised Miss White to a stellar place among opera singers. She gave the music with that artistic perception and finish that every measure demands. Her success was so pronounced that the management decided to present "Manon Lescaut" as the opera for the opening of the Chicago season. From "The Musical Leader" November 7, 1912.

To appear shortly at The Burns in concert, The Burns will soon be celebrated as the home of high-class music, with the unusually fine concerts and the good support being given we may soon look for symphony concert again.

THE DOG AT THE PLAY

"Lutie," the Maltese poodle, used in "Speed" at The Burns last week, made his debut at the age of six weeks, not before the footlights but over the footlights—at a Christmas matinee last year in New Orleans. When Miss Ferguson was handed a large bouquet she never dreamed that a tiny dog nestled amidst the blossoms. Imagine her surprise when she beheld two small black eyes peering at her! He was christened "Lutie" at the suggestion of a member of the company—that being the name of the theater at which Miss Ferguson was playing a stock engagement. "Lutie" was a Christmas present sent over the footlights from the wife of the dramatic critic of a well known New Orleans paper.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—A play whose tragedy is so old it is immortal, and therefore scarcely needs reviewing, and a second offering whose comedy is so new as to be untried, marked the opening of the present week in the New York theaters.

"HAMLET."
The production whereof we speak, first is "Hamlet," which Mr. John E. Kellard has chosen to begin a season of classical drama at the Garden theater. Mr. Kellard himself acted the man prince at the premier on Monday night, performing that difficult role with considerable merit.

He has surrounded himself with an excellent company, though his production showed no new scenic beauties or unsuspected heights of tragedy. In his cast were Edwin Dalton, who presented a highly conventional Polonius; A. Stevenson, who played King Charles; and Theodore Roberts, who played the ghost.

"WHAT AILS YOU?"
The unripe farce already mentioned was staged in the Criterion, also on Monday night. It was entitled "What Ails You?" and bore on its program the information that Rupert Hughes was to be created or blamed for its authorship.

"What Ails You?" might be termed a farce of the new school. For a long time there has been an evident trend among the knights of the quill to lay the ancient comedy of quick action and witty lines in the mothballs and to substitute a farce whose construction takes on the disinterested interest of a vaudeville performance.

"What Ails You?" is a fine example of this new farce construction, though it is significant that it distinctly failed to score at its premiere.

The action of the piece begins in the dining room of the St. Ritz. Here members from every status of society are gathered about the tables, and here also do they all agree to repair to Medill's sanitarium for reasons both external and internal.

The second act finds them there in the gymnasium and the third act finds them across country on a 20-mile chase after a comic situation. As comedy is notoriously light-footed, it cannot be held as strange that they never even get within speaking distance of

Mr. Hughes has so loosely strung the pearls of humor on his story's thread that much of the fun of the piece rests with the typical selection of the characters. Thus it is that many a good laugh is wasted on one individual, who weighs close to 300 pounds, and on his fellow actor, who scales but 85.

So little progress was made with "What Ails You?" that it seems almost criminal to name those actors and actresses who played parts in its cast. It might be mentioned, however, that Shelley Hull, William Courtleigh, Margaret Skirvin and George McGrath are among those whose fair reputations suffered most.

"The Staircase Waltz"

THE LATEST TERPISCHOREAN NOVELTY THAT HAS COME FROM CONTINENTAL EUROPE

Continental Europe has long been a dance-mad. It is not told that when the Goths and Vandals came down in hordes upon the civilization of that day long ago that they came to waltz time although their victims danced to a tune the world has never forgotten, but it is sure that the Germans long ago were solemnly waltzing with sober precision. The modern waltz dates back, however, to the time when the Viennese took the old waltz movement, changed its tempo to suit their Magyar vivacity, gave it a new twist, and then set it before the world to live forever in the melodies of Strauss—both the elder and the younger—Offenbach and others like Suppe.

But for all the fascinations of the minuet, the mazurka, schottische and other dances, Europe has been faithful to her waltz. She has tried them all—the American "Turkey Trot," the "Motor Glide" and the "Bunny Hug" have been welcomed, calmly observed, and danced, and then—Europe returned to her waltz.

Her people have been experimenting, however, and at last have followed the trend towards more strenuous dancing. Bruno Granichstaedten, dilettante, composer of half the Cabaret entertainments of Vienna and Berlin, who now makes his acquaintance with the American public through the coming of his operetta, "The Rose Maid," planned a new waltz, a whimsical, flirtatious dance in which the ardent waltz and the coquettish minuet dance idly separate to leave

On the left is Beatrice Allen, who is starring in "Ziegfeld's Follies," at the Moulin Rouge. In the center is Margaret Skirvin, who is playing in "What Ails You?" at the Criterion. On the right, at the top, is Gertrude Hoffman, who is playing in "Broadway to Paris" at the Winter Garden. And at the bottom, is Mrs. Fiske, who is starring in "The High Road," at the Hudson theater.

"NEVER SAY DIE."

To turn from the mortuary gloom that enshrouded the "Criterion," to the ready laughter of a William Collier play is a pleasant occupation. The play, now have in mind is "Never Say Die," which had its premiere at the Forty-eighth Street theater on Tuesday evening.

Collier ranks high among latter day comedians. He has that faculty of talking nonsense that is one of the rarest gifts within the province of the Maker. And with this faculty over at his command, he never fails to please.

It was no surprise, therefore, that greeted the readers of Wednesday morning's papers when they read of the hit he scored in "Never Say Die" on the previous evening.

"Never Say Die," is the motto of Dionysius Woodbury, who has been promised by his physicians that he will die before a month has passed. Under this delusion he marries a young girl in order to leave her his money so that she may marry the poor artist of her choice. And behold at the end of a year he still lives! He has tried all the sure deaths—cigarettes, cocktails and night air, but he seems to thrive thereon. In fact when a year has passed he is well, strong and blooming and his wife openly acknowledges that she married him, which provides a pleasant hint of romance with which to terminate a night of laughter.

As for the actors, they formed a good support for Collier. Emily Fitzroy, as a pleasant mother-in-law; Grant Stewart, as the valet, faithful even unto swearing off whiskey; and eight at Daly's theater under the title of "The Red Petticoat." The first two operations were performed by Mrs. Young and Paul West and the music was supplied by Jerome D. Kern.

"The Red Petticoat" in every way proved a pleasant and entertaining musical comedy. It revolved about the advent of a woman barber, in a little western mining camp—one of those places where the men all dress in correct knickerbocker suits and talk "resardness."

The woman barber, Sophie Brush, who is Miss Helen Lovell off the stage, enters the camp amid the jeers of its male inhabitants and remains to be its idol. Before a week is past she has the boys all nicely shaved, manicured, and drilled into a polite bodyguard. The possibilities for a woman barber seem to be good in the west.

Miss Lowell made a distinct hit as the barberess, as did Donald Macdonald, a juvenile, who danced and sang well and is sure to be heard from in the future. The music was of that catchy order so dear to the heart of those who write the comic opera scores.

"THE GYPSY."
"The Gypsy," a new Bixley-Luders operetta, which had its premiere at the Park on Thursday night, provided nothing new or interesting in the way of plot, music or acting.

There was the familiar old crane who is about to die and who at the last moment confesses that she has changed "those children" and that the gypsy girl is really the nobleman's daughter. Whereupon follow the stereotyped complications.

Even the scene of the production is laid in England while other time-worn comic opera properties are dressed in the shape of the fortune hunting court, the typical stage Englishman, etc., etc.

The music of the new operetta, which aims all the way through to catch the slow swing of romance, is of better singing qualities than usual in native musical plays, and the orchestration is more carefully worked out. The leading tenor, Francis Lieb, who is neither able to get nor shows any interest in that branch of musical comedy art, enters a good deal about singing and knows how as well. He has a well trained voice which he uses with fine spirit.

A. M. Holbrook staged the production, but it is not apparent that he was inspired. Nor for that matter, was anybody else connected with the piece.

Ann Swinburne, the prima donna of the Franz Lehár-Glen MacDonough musical romance, "The Count of Luxembourg," now crowding the New Amsterdam theater in New York, is a grandniece of the poet Swinburne. This has not interfered in any way with her musical success on the stage. Grandniece Algebron was long on poetry, but shy on vocal ability. His grandniece is right up at the head of the procession when it comes to singing.

"THE GYPSY."
"The Gypsy," a new Bixley-Luders operetta, which had its premiere at the Park on Thursday night, provided nothing new or interesting in the way of plot, music or acting.

There was the familiar old crane who is about to die and who at the last moment confesses that she has changed "those children" and that the gypsy girl is really the nobleman's daughter. Whereupon follow the stereotyped complications.

Even the scene of the production is laid in England while other time-worn comic opera properties are dressed in the shape of the fortune hunting court, the typical stage Englishman, etc., etc.

The music of the new operetta, which aims all the way through to catch the slow swing of romance, is of better singing qualities than usual in native musical plays, and the orchestration is more carefully worked out. The leading tenor, Francis Lieb, who is neither able to get nor shows any interest in that branch of musical comedy art, enters a good deal about singing and knows how as well. He has a well trained voice which he uses with fine spirit.

A. M. Holbrook staged the production, but it is not apparent that he was inspired. Nor for that matter, was anybody else connected with the piece.

Vivacious Melodies in "The Rose Maid"

"The Rose Maid" tingling with vivacious melodies and unfolding a story more entrancing than is found in recent musical comedy successes, will be presented for the first time in this city at the Grand Opera house. Monday and Tuesday, December 9 and 10. It is described as an operetta with songs that add rather than halt the plot. Bruno Granichstaedten, composed the score and the melodies have been called far from commonplace. They are filled with little surprises of melody, a certain restlessness of rhythm that acts the audience humming and sends it out with puckering lips. The modern book of the opera is almost a satire and follows closely the German original.

This latest production by Werba and Luescher who sent us "The Spring Maid" to cheer the music loving, has won a flattering verdict on its tuneful joyous music. It has been rated a success to compare with "The Spring Maid," and all have given it credit for alluring qualities that assure a charm and attractive beauty.

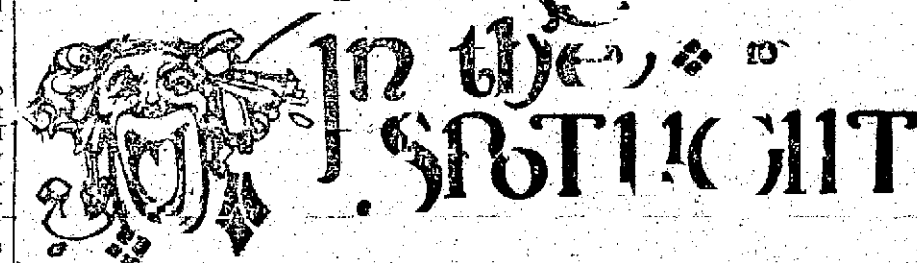

A penniless duke, quite at the mercy of his creditors after his disinheritance by a wealthy uncle, is deserted by all save the little rose girl. The arrival on the scene of a few millionaires from America looking for titles cause his creditors to plan a scheme to marry him off and then reimburse themselves. A countess, who has an old score to settle with this group, counter-plots by disguising the little rose maid as one of the heiresses, and painting her off as the richest of the little hunters. The duke has unconsciously loved her all along, and in her disguise he falls in love with her again.

There is said to be rich fun in the conduct of the coterie of foreign bankers who have been financing the duke, their parts furnishing roles for a number of excellent comedians. Their "Money Talks" song is one of the big hits of the show. In the end they are all outwitted by the little rose girl, and ingeniously enough, not only the hero and the heroine, but the near villains are made happy.

There are numerous catchy songs in "The Rose Maid," one in particular, "Blossom Bloom For Lovers," being hummed and whistled wherever the music is heard. The chorus is described as a "Rosebud Garden of Girls," and they are all dancers of the Gaiety girl type. The two acts are elaborately staged, three carloads of scenery being required for the production.

Werba and Luescher announce their great New York company of players, comedians, chorus and special orchestra for this engagement.

The record of "Ben Hur" is quite extraordinary this year. After 13 years of unparalleled success it is playing to the capacity of theaters throughout the country once more. Perhaps a reason for this is that the company is kept up to the same high standard as ever and the production is complete in every detail. The present tour is one of the most extensive ever undertaken by so large a company with such an elaborate equipment. It will include all of the leading cities to the Pacific coast and back.

William H. Crane is meeting with marked success on his tour in "The Senator Keeps House." This is his fifth year upon the stage. Incidentally Joseph Brooks, who is directing the tour, began his theatrical career by managing the initial starring tour of Mr. Crane over thirty-five years ago. Their association in the present jubilee celebration is of decided interest.

The two American companies presenting that most popular of musical comedies, "The Pink Lady," are meeting with marked success. One is at the present time in Philadelphia, and the other is being greeted by large and fashionable audiences throughout the south. Eight companies are presenting the McCall-Carnall play in Europe and Australia. Another company will start its tour in South Africa early in December, and still another will begin a season in Hongkong in January. Some record for a musical play that had its first production in America and was introduced to the public by American managers.

Hall Caine is at work upon the dramatization of his novel "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." It will be produced by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger and Joseph Brooks. It is likely that Mr. Caine will come to this country to witness the first appearance of the play.

A No. 3 "Rose Maid" show will go out on the road around Christmas time. The demand for the opera with the profitable business drawn by the original and No. 2 companies has decided Werba & Luescher, its managers, to extend the immediate field.

To celebrate the two hundred and fiftieth performance of "Milestones" at the Royalty theater in London, a decidedly unique dinner was given by the O. P. club, at the Cecil hotel, recently. Lord Howard de Walden presiding. Over 300 members and guests were present. Toasts were responded to by actors representing the three periods of "Milestones"—1869—1885 and 1912. Alfred E. Hopkins spoke for "1869" and was replied to by Miss Genevieve Ward and James Fernandez. H. B. Irving proposed "1885," Sir Squire Bancroft replied, "1912" was allotted to Lord Howard de Walden, and the response was the hands of Dennis Eadie and Gladys Cooper.

Henry Miller will shortly produce a play entitled "Blackbirds." Harry James Smith, who will be called as the author of "Mrs. B. Stead-Leigh," in which Miss L. Hope Crews, formerly a member Henry Miller's company, will make first appearance as a star. The drama with a timely subject in espionage to American theaters, "Prominent in Miss Crews' support be Mathilde Cottrell, Florence S. Elliot Winthrop, Bertha Webby, ney Valentine, James Bradbury, Henry O. Taylor.

By an arrangement entered into Charles Frohman recently, the "Calloway and Co. Players' comedy "The Rose" has been secured by Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger for Miss Gladys Cooper. "Primrose" ran for over a year at the Comedie Francaise. Other known plays by the same authors "Love Watches," "Inconstant Gec and "Decorating Clementine." Hearings are now in progress and Frohman will appear in the new comedy before the holidays. "Prim" tells the love story of the daughter of a French aristocrat. In one act it is an old story, in that the court true love does not run smooth. O to financial losses Primrose's leaves for Texas and she elects to enter a convent, but does not take final vows. At the end of the play, however, she is married. The scenes "Primrose" are laid in Anjou and set in a feudal atmosphere which the date is the present century.

A FILIPINO "FISH WHEEL"

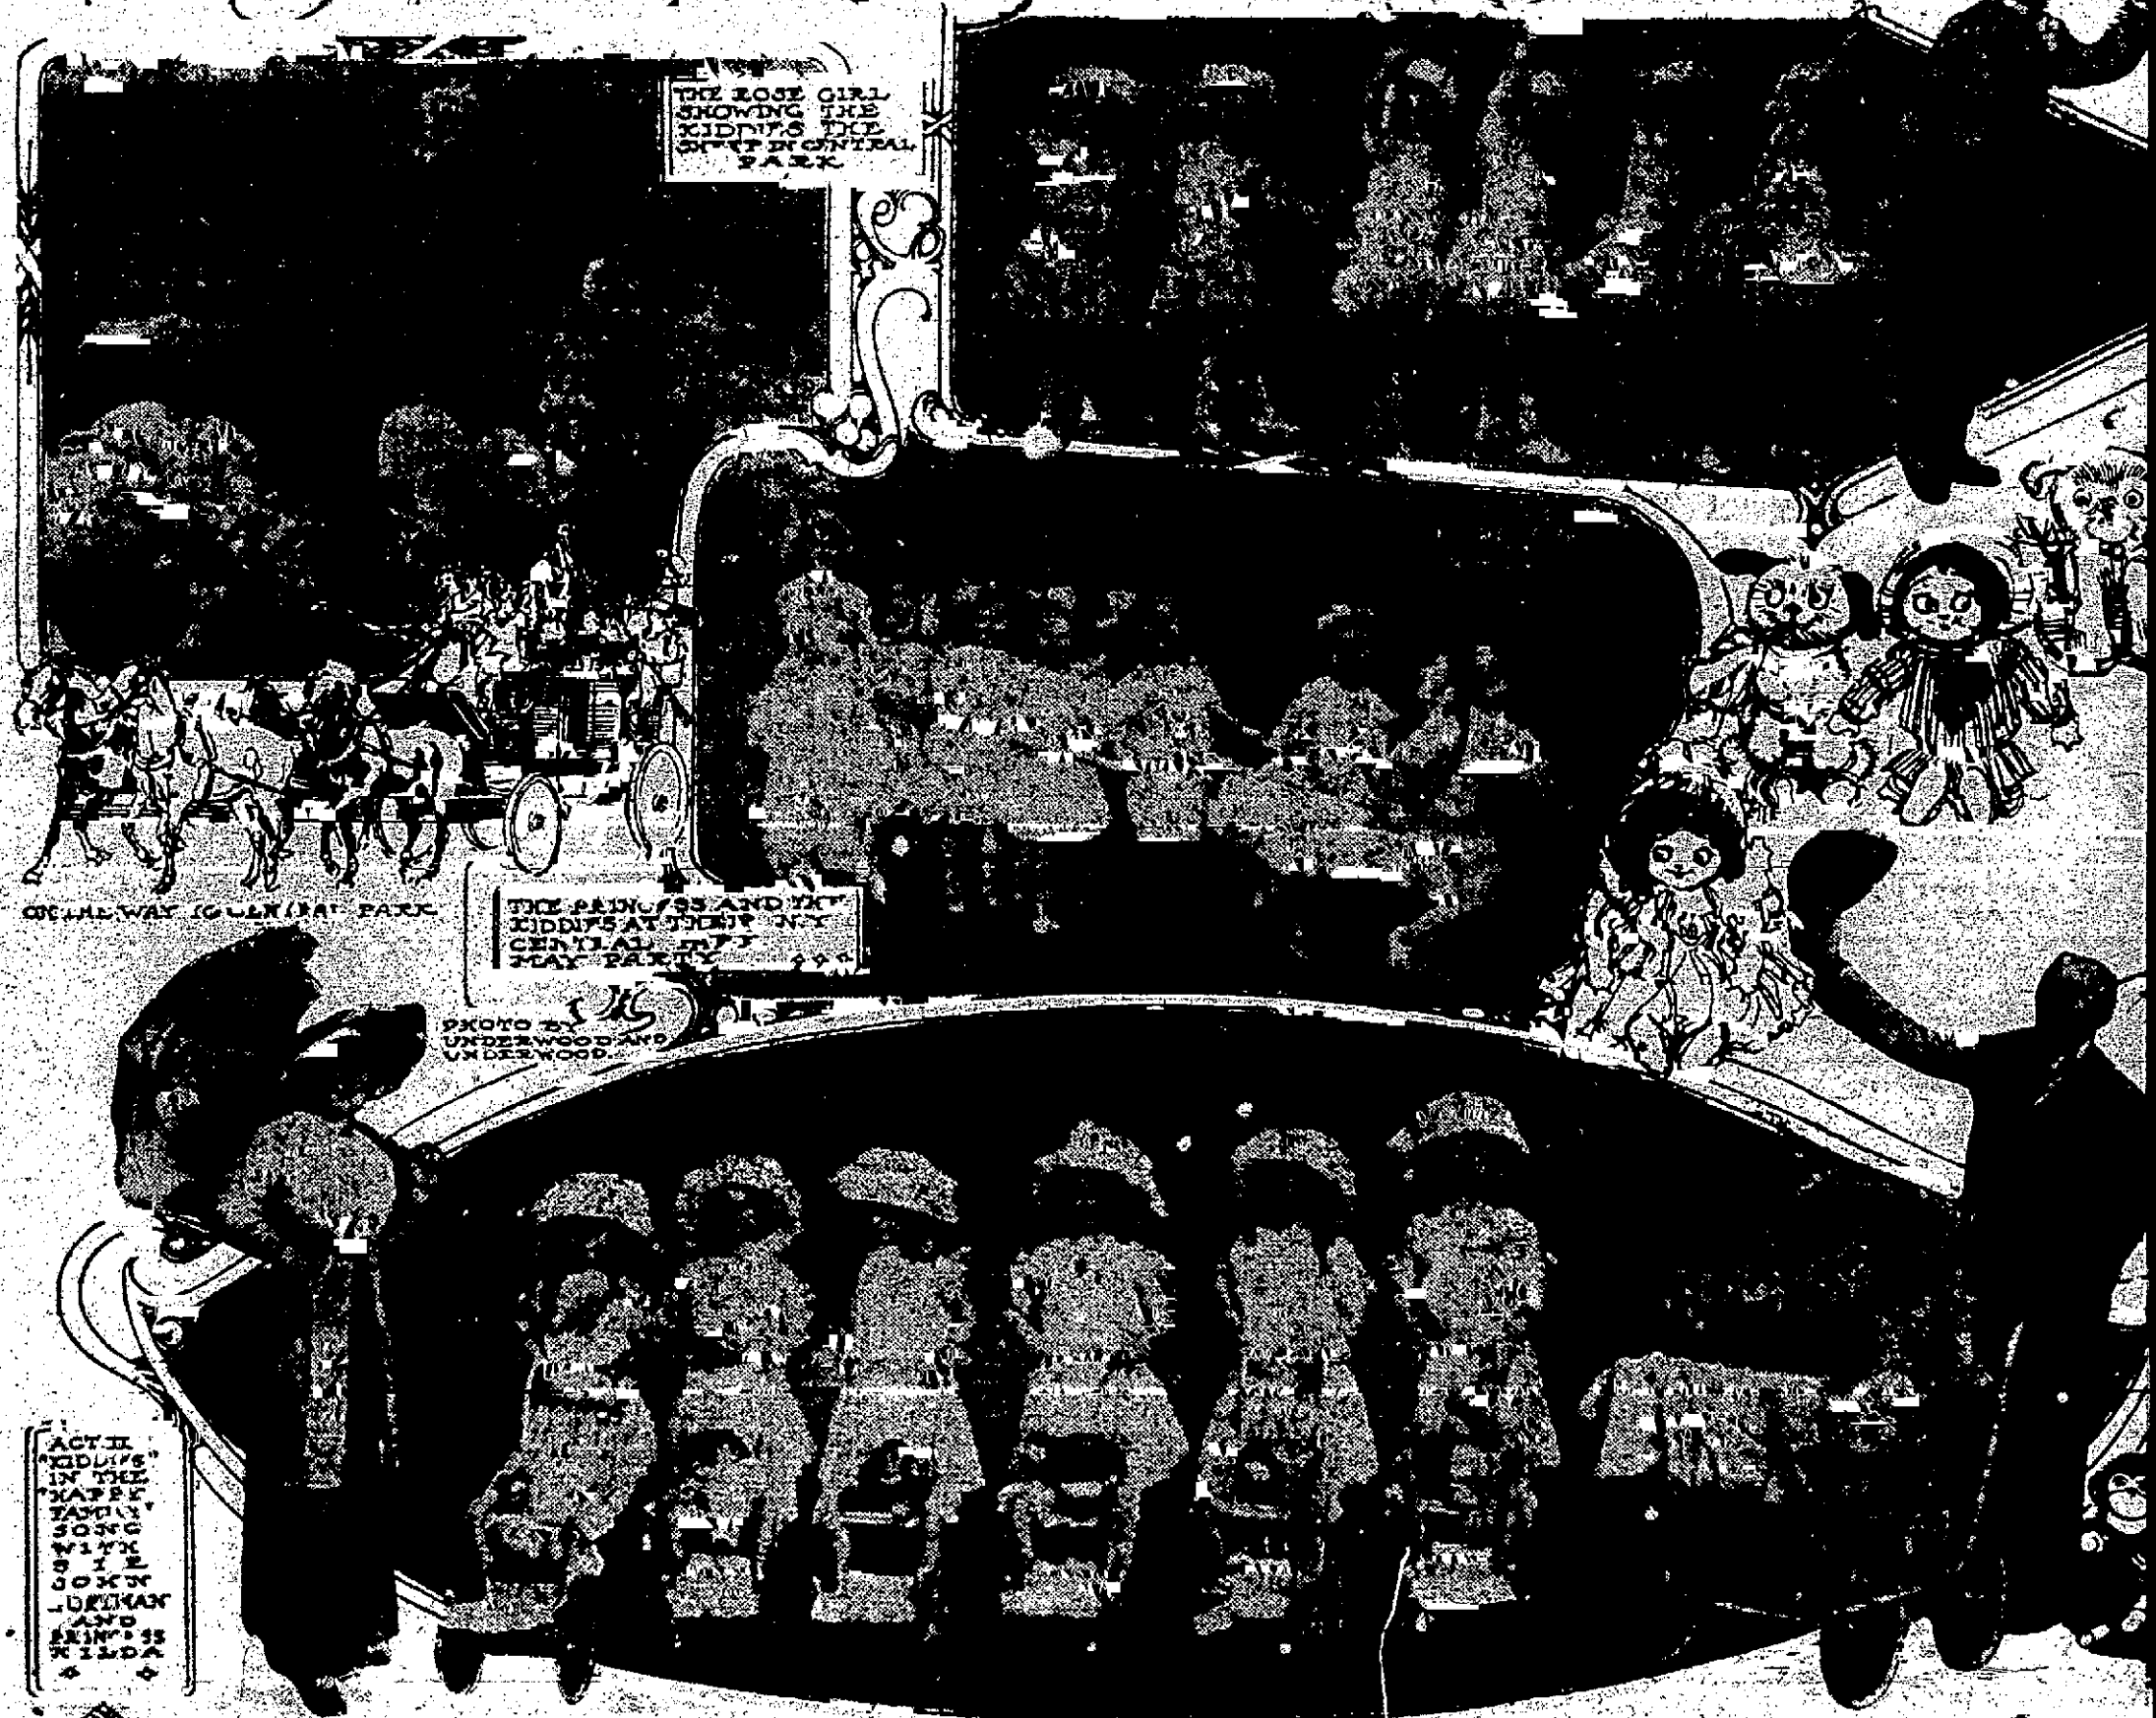

F. W. Bogan, in the Outing Magazine, writes of a remarkable method of fishing fish without doubt that by the Filipinos in Manila bay, nets belong to the dip-net family are on so large a scale that one hardly realize their relationship to group. This type of net, called natives salamba, often measure feet in diameter and 25 feet in depth. Suspended by four small buoys which hang from two large rights or masts. These masts are attached to the deck of the queer craft called aparao, in such a manner as to allow them and the net, raised and lowered by means of and tackle attached to the stern.

When lowered for use, the net is sufficiently weighted to carry it deep the water, and there it is allowed to remain at rest for a while. On two fishermen in an 11 ft. diameter circle at some distance around the boat and the water with flat is attached to poles. This is to drive fish toward the net, which is suddenly at the proper time. The fish are aware of danger, the surrounded by the net and quickly started out of the water.

FOR THE GOLFER

Harold H. Hilton, in the Outing Magazine, writes of a player may play himself quite by continually practicing with w clubs, and there is really no need of doing so, but with iron clubs a different matter. To my mind, player cannot practice too much them, and the more he practices shots in the playing of which admittedly weak, the better for

THE PIRATE'S LAIR BECOMES A BIRD HAVEN

FROM a pirate lair to a bird refuge is some change, but as it may seem to the youthful devotee of five-cent literature it is wholly in accord with our effete times.

Marsh Island, off the Louisiana coast, is the scene of this change. It has only been an island for the last one hundred and four years, which is rather a short time from the geologist's point of view. In 1808 Jean Lafitte, pirate and freebooter, had a channel cut across a point of land, thus forming an island.

Of course, this action could only mean one thing—that Lafitte's treasure was buried here. So since his day many an hour of fruitless effort has been spent with pick and shovel by lazy optimists in pursuit of the Frenchman's elusive pieces of eight and Louis d'ors.

BUT if cash is not easily available, Nature has, in the trite phrase, been prodigal. The island is alive with birds and animals. Thanks to Mrs. Russell Sage, these will henceforth enjoy a peace and quiet such as has been unknown to them for a long time.

When the pirate had the canal cut from Cote Blanche Bay to Michoud Bay he had only the easier handling of his boats in mind, but unintentionally gave a helping hand to Nature. For on this island the birds were protected from many of their natural enemies, and were so aided in their struggle for existence.

Not only is the island a better home for the birds, but it is infinitely easier to patrol as a bird refuge.

Of course in modern times the birds have been mercilessly slaughtered by pot and plume hunters. Edward A. McIlhenny and Charles W. Ward, both of whom have established refuges themselves, have indeed Mrs. Russell Sage to purchase the island, and henceforth it will be a birds' retreat where the sound of a gun will be unknown.

The canal which was dug has been widened by the tides to two and a half miles, and from it various winding bayous penetrate the marshy interior. The island is eighteen miles long and about nine miles wide. The bayous mentioned cut the interior up into a swampy jungle.

IN this and along the shore are wonderful oyster beds and reefs, and the marshes are rich with terrapin. In the chain of lakes and ponds you find otter, coon, muskrat, and mink, and on the higher places deer and wild hogs are plentiful. The bird-life is myriad, and the island changes with the seasons from a nesting place to a feeding ground for the migratory birds from the North. Some of those which come to Marsh Island in the summer are the red-head duck, the dusky duck, or black mallard, blue and green-winged teal, and canvas-back, herons, cranes, curlew, plover, snipe and shore birds of all sorts.

Marsh Island has certainly not been placed under protection a moment too soon. Swamp and marsh reclamation work along that coast is fast driving the birds out from other haunts; and the destructive work of the merciless hunter, either for sport or for profit, has already brought the extinction of many birds within the probabilities of the next quarter century. Game laws, although they are improving in most of the States, are almost non-operative in the parts where the birds naturally congregate. Refuges are an imperative need, and especially in Louisiana.

THE green and the snowy heron, together with bitterns, are the chief summer residents. McIlhenny, by establishing his wonderful bird city at his home on Avery Island near by, had saved the snowy heron almost from annihilation. In 1894 he constructed a pond near his home, and the next year he found eight young herons, which he took from the nests. These were reared that summer, and in November they migrated South to tropical America. Six of the eight returned with the Spring and built their nests. Year by year the colony increased—for these water-birds nest in colonies—and others, both of the snowy species and the blue and Louisiana herons, came to nest there. Now it is estimated by what is as nearly an actual count as it is possible to make, that 100,000 herons come there yearly, and are protected. The nesting water and marsh birds now include the three species mentioned, the little blue heron, American egret, yellow-crowned night heron, purple gallinule, Florida gallinule, American bittern, least bittern, king rail, whistling wood duck, blue-wing teal, mallard and mallard, besides a great number of land birds.

BY commencing with a few pairs ducks were also encouraged to make their winter quarters in McIlhenny's bird city. Now more than 25,000 feed there every Winter.

Lafitte, the Swashbuckling Freebooter, Had His Treasure Island, Which He Had Separated From the Mainland by Forcing the Digging of a Canal. The Sea Then Took Up the Work, and the Island, Now Well Away From the Mainland, Is to Be Put to Better Uses.

every Winter. To stand by the edge of the lake in the evening and hear and see the birds returning to their roosting places in the dusk is a wonderful experience. The short-lived tremendous flutter of wings and the bird noises before they settle to rest are like the hum of a great city. Perhaps after all is quiet, a belated teal, that bird of so beautiful a flight, will come whistling in on the evening winds from the Gulf at a speed of one hundred miles an hour, and with a whizzing drop like a bullet will sink into the sedge not twenty yards away. Thousands of birds may be quite within a stone's throw of you. That is very near Marsh Island.

Among other migratory birds that come to the Marsh Island refuge is the golden plover, whose marvelous yearly migration has been the wonder of ornithologists. The routes taken by this bird in its migration have been ingeniously traced. Beginning in the Fall, after its nesting season in the Arctic, the plover moves to the shores of Labrador and Nova Scotia just before it flies southward. Then, at the tip of Winter, this small band of feathered wings itself which in the air and starts out on its flight of 2,400 miles to the mainland of South America without a rest.

A LARGE number of them also migrate along the shore in short stages, and years ago they were an abundant game bird on the Long Island shores. A stormy period of a day may force the golden plover to rest for a day on the remote Bermudas, or on one of the Lesser Antilles; but these stops are resorted to only in case of storms; for one reason, because there is little or no food there. After this long voyage it goes far to the south, to Argentina, and returning, comes back by slow and short stages along the shores of the Gulf and up the Mississippi Valley, reaching the nesting place in June. It accomplishes yearly a migration of some 16,000 miles. The reason for this of migration is traced back to the glacial period food is always the main factor in determining the of the feathered travelers. The plover and many migratory birds of the same sort frequent the about Marsh Island on the way up.

HOW DOGS ARE "FAKED"

DOGS are "faked" that is, unlawfully altered in appearance to deceive. There are two classes of people—dishonest exhibitors, who aim at hoodwinking a judge, and dishonest dealers, who aim at defrauding the buyer. Of the two, surely the former is the more contemptible, for he or she takes unfair advantage under peculiarly mean circumstances.

The time between legitimate preparation for a show and what the Kennel Club would punish with suspension as "faking" is often finely drawn. Thus, in certain rough-haired dogs the coat should be of a harsh texture, free from softness or wooliness, and not too "full." The legitimate use of the finger and thumb to remove dead hair is one thing; the illegal plucking of "fast" or new hair, the shaving of a dog, so as to ensure the new coat of being of just the right length for a certain show, or the absolute cutting and singeing of coats to improve the appearance—all such methods as these are downright faking.

WIRE-HAIRED fox terriers are often seen so skillfully barbered as to be almost grotesque; curly-coated retrievers are shorn long enough before showing to ensure a nice crop of new, tight curls, and the head is trimmed to look smooth and clean. Hot irons are said to be used; if Nature has not supplied the correct sort of curls.

Those who purchase the fashionable top Poms should beware, if not absolutely sure of their breeder or dealer, for the practice of dyeing, or plucking out, the white hairs, which detract immensely from the value of blacks and other whole-colored dogs, is common enough. The severity of the penalty for such conduct was recently shown in a case brought before the Kennel Club, when the offender was suspended for life from judicial functions, and for a period of years from showing, or even attendance, at shows. Black dogs are also victims of clever faking, for the golden pencil on the toes, the curious thumbnails on the legs, are all added if absent, while tan in any undesirable spot is dyed black.

In most breeds great stress is laid upon a level jaw, and teeth are filed or removed, as the case may demand, if a dog is slightly undershot—that is, if the lower jaw projects beyond the upper. This is a practice which may be stigmatized as faking.

Where a soft coat is a blemish the dog is frequently washed with alum and water, that for a time it may "handle" better—another attempt to deceive. If a white color is essential and the dog is somewhat

The DOGGONEDDEST GRAVEYARD of ALL.

A Typical Headstone.

O dogs go to heaven? Is there a dog heaven—a happy hereafter for faithful canine friends? These questions are suggested in an epitaph on a tombstone in the animal cemetery at Hartsdale, N. Y., where one of the very few cemeteries for dogs nestles amid the hills and valleys of eastern Westchester County. It is known as "the doggoneddest cemetery" since the first.

There lie the forms of proud blue-ribbon winners, decorated companions of high and low degree, dogs with long pedigrees and others which had no pedigree at all, but were ardently loved.

Pets of actors and actresses fill many of the graves. Under tributes are engraved on slabs of stone, and the memory of dumb but fond and faithful friends is kept constant with fresh flowers. Pathetic symbols of human grief.

Probability of a dog heaven and canine immortality suggested in these stanzas on a headstone:

BABY.

Her little life is over,
And we, who now are left behind,
Wonder, perchance, if we shall meet again;
And if there may not be set a place apart
For dim uncertain souls like hers
Who know not wherefore they thus live and die.

To one who sees the love in eyes of such,
So loving, patient, intermixed with wonderment, (Canst believe but what a soul looks out,
Though weak indeed it is as yet.

We know that nothing is for naught,
Even the love that such as these have given,
(Which truer oftentimes is than man's for man),
And so it seems to me but just—
Love and justice being of all words most strong—
That timid, half-awakened souls like these Are given a chance sometime, somewhere to KNOW.

The reason, and to what end, they suffer, live and die.

And as they live under the law—as do all things—
By love we rise, and although blind to all the evils holds dear,
Blind to the Summer glory over all the land,
To flowers and trees and to the sun,
Shining upon the faces that were loved,
Deaf to the sound of raindrops falling in the
Or voices calling:
The Great To Be for such a one as this will bring Back all that was—and more. E. M. IL.

And hermetically sealed, children's caskets are used occasionally. Some of these are lined with plush and white silk and contain pillows of flowers. Valuable collars are often interred with dogs. Some bodies are embalmed by veterinarians.

A evidence that dead pets are not forgotten is found in the fact that mourners visit graves and decorate them with flowers and garlands. Many theatrical people visit the cemetery during the "Theatre" Sunday affords.

Photographs of dogs, under glass, are placed in depressions in the faces of headstones. One slab with such a portrait, shown in an illustration, bears this epitaph:

OUR SIDNEY

Died Sept. 4, 1902.
Aged 16 years.
Born A Dog
Lived Like A Gentleman
Died Beloved.

Old names of dogs are visible. For instance: "Our Boomer, died June 23, 1911, faithful friend of E. P. and S. W. Cassidy," and "In memory of our pet, Rags 15 years and 3 months old, died July 25, 1910," also "Our dear little fox terrier, Dame Trot, died July 29, 1906, faithful and loving unto the end."

Superlative regard is indicated in such inscriptions as "Tobias, best loved friend of Miss H. Paronholtz," and "Mignon, dearest and best beloved friend of Ady Van Tassel Billington."

Affection such as a parent might lavish on a child is thus expressed: "Chubb, mother's baby boy and companion, died April 22, 1912, aged 14 years, we all loved him," and

TRANS-OUR DARLING, TROTT
SEPT. 6, 1910, AGED SEVEN

IN one instance this legend is prominent: "Lulu and Bolder, good dogs of J. N. Costello." One stone, beneath which an Irish and Gordon setter are buried, reads: "Dearly beloved pets, they were inseparable companions and now sleep side by side."

Some dogs buried in Hartsdale are far from their native heath. For example: "Beloved pet Flossie, born Lemberg, Wurtemberg, Germany, died Feb. 12, 1906," and "Rama, born in Rome Italy, died Nov. 1909, aged 14 years."

But there are other inscriptions, two being: "Our pet cat, Smully, 1895-1901," and "Minnie, my beloved cat, died February 27, 1904." Even a lion finds sepulchre there. The words on this headstone reading: "Beneath this stone is buried the beautiful young lion, Goldflock, whose death was sincerely mourned by his mistress, Frances Lwoff Parlaghy, New York, 1912."

IN common with other cemeteries, this one has its stories of ghosts and narratives of the nocturnal roamings of dog spirits grip the minds of children in the neighborhood as strongly as tales of human spectres.

Boys and girls who play in the graveyard by daylight scamper from the inclosure at the first sign of gathering gloom. And when, at nightfall, a dog barks in the distance, childish imaginations see the spook of an unhappy Rover, or Jack, or Bobby rising from a grave in sepulchral isolation to bay at the moon shining through the trees on the sleeping city of the dog dead.

Dog funerals are common. One morning two coaches with grape curtains closely drawn drove slowly up the country road leading to the cemetery and stopped at the entrance. Four women in black and two men alighted. The men removed a little, white, wreath-decked casket and bore it to a new-made grave. The women, carrying flowers, followed. Standing at the open tomb the group saw the casket lowered out of sight by tall bearers, and the mourners dropped blossoms into the grave. When a smooth mound marked the spot they covered it with flowers and ferns. Drying their tears, they withdrew and re-entered their carriages.

There was none to be had, however, except he was to share a room with a nigger. Pat was tired, said he. "Didn't mind the least bit in the world," and tumbled in, first asking the innkeeper to call at five o'clock in the morning.

But there was a conspiracy on foot. All the world was to think an Irishman the butt for every kind of

So several other occupants of the inn crept up, and in the silent hours of the night blackened his face with the aid of a burnt cork. Morning came, and Pat had a scramble to get to his room, so he dispensed with any unnecessary scrubbing. Imagine his utter astonishment, then, as, on passing a mirror, he caught sight of his face in the glass. His countenance slowly dawned over his characteristic countenance, and strange words came slowly from his lips.

"Shute and begorra!" he cried, aghast, "they've done the wrong man!"

Levelling It Up.

The proprietor of the big shop on the corner was a lecher, flourishing withal and keenly business-like, was at the post of duty midway between the red and green vias when the fierce-looking lady entered his premises, but he rubbed his hands and greeted her cordially.

"Good-evening, madam," he whinnied, in his high pitched voice. "And what may I have the great pleasure of doing for you?"

The feminine lady placed her arms akimbo, and faced him angrily.

"The other night," she said, in sepulchral tones, "you sold my husband a bottle of tonic, and he came home and went for me like anything. What yer goin' to do about it?"

For a brief moment the man of medicine was non-plussed, but only for a moment. Then he turned on his mightiest customer his sweetest smile, and suavely remarked:

"Well, madam, buy two bottles for yourself, and then so homo and get even with him!"

He Farned His Salary.

"Do you sell stamps here?" the elderly lady asked the man behind the counter.

"Yes, madam," replied the clerk in charge, politely.

"Can I buy any quantity I like?" went on the old lady fiercely.

"Why, yes, madam. Can I?"

"Have you got any one-cent ones?"

"Yes, madam," said the long-suffering one behind the grille. "Hoo."

"I want them altogether—not torn apart," pursued the relentless lady.

"And how many do you want?" The polite clerk was losing his temper.

"One-cent ones, don't forget." She glowered at him over her spectacles.

"Why, certainly, madam. How many?"

"I'll have six cents' worth."

"Here they are. Now, will you please?"

"Here, young man. I've as much right to be here as you have. I won't be hurried!" snapped the venerable dame. Then, as she sauntered towards the door, a gratified smile illuminated her features.

"Anyhow," she murmured, "I made one member of the postoffice earn his salary."

On the Instalment System.

They were experts in many things, but chiefly in the art of bragging. And at the moment they were discussing their own wonderful feats as vocalists.

"Why," said the American, blowing rings of smoke from his cigar, "the first time I sang in public the audience simply showered me with bouquets. Bless you, there were enough to start a flower-shop!"

"Faith, an' I can beat you!" cried the Irishman.

"The first time I sang was at an open-air concert, and, begorra, the audience were that delighted they presented me with a house, they did!"

"A house? You must be off your head!" interrupted the American scoffingly.

"Not at all," answered Pat. "I tell ye they gave me a house—but it was a brick at a time!"

It All Depended.

Fair Elizabeth tripped blithely into the country postoffice.

"Now, I want to know," she demanded, with a tell-tale blush, as she handed the clerk a pink communication addressed to her lover, "how long it will be before I get an answer to this letter?"

"That depends," he answered. "If he's in jail they will let him write once a week or, maybe, once a month only. If he's dead broke he'll have to wait till he can earn the price of a stamp, and I have no data upon which to base an opinion of his earning capacities. If he's all in bed he may not care to dictate his heart's sentiments to a cold, disinterested third party; and if it's smallpox they want let him write at all, ditto if he's dead. Then, again, if he's got a new girl—"

At which moment he realized that the fair Elizabeth had flown.

Her Father Scored.

Miss Rosy Nohah had just returned from a finishing school, and had vigorously fulfilled all that was required of her in the scholastic line.

She and her father were sitting in the dining-room. "That air," remarked her relative.

"Father dear," interrupted Rosy, "it's vulgar to say 'that air.' You should say, 'that something there,' or, preferably, just 'that.'"

"Well, this air," commenced her father; but he was cut off again.

"No, father," smirked the dutiful daughter. "That's just as vulgar. You must avoid such expressions as 'this ere'."

Father became irate.

"Look here, my girl," said he, "I'm going to say what I mean. That air is bad for this ear of mine, and I'm going to shut the window!"

And after that Rosy said no more.

Same Old Story.

"Good-morning, madam! I've called about the quarter's rates."

So spoke the rate-collector, ingratiatingly.

The lady of the house eyed him coolly. She'd got the money ready.

"Good-morning," she replied amiably, "but I can't say I'm exactly glad to see you."

"Then that's where you differ from most of 'em," retorted the visitor. "A lot of them like me so much that they nearly always ask me to call again!"

Always So Business-like.

Business was the beginning and end of his life. He'd got married, but it was in a spare moment between organizing a "great bargain sale" and dismissing the errand-boy.

One day, when the third baby was four weeks old, his wife came bustling into his office.

"Isn't it lovely, dear?" she gurgled. "Father has sent us five pounds for our new baby!"

He never looked up from the accounts he was making up.

"Right-ho," he murmured abstractedly. "You wrap him up and post the parcel, while I write out the receipt for the money."

A REMARKABLE STORY

by Kim Hovey

The Intrepid Merry Passed the Armed Guards and Climbed the Wall Which Surrounds the Former Sultan's Prison, and After Spending a Day in the Forbidden Quadrangle Made Good His Escape.

His First Hand Narrative Is One of the Best Written Fact Adventure Stories of the Day It Is Striking Proof That Truth Can Be as Well Written as Fiction.

The head that wears the crown lies uneasily, the head that has worn it often lies still more uncomfortably when deprived forcibly of its accustomed decoration.

This is especially true if the deposed sovereign is kept safely jailed—politely, "in retreat"—to prevent him from endeavoring to retake his throne.

A once powerful man robbed entirely of his power is an interesting figure in any country—as picturesque as a ruined castle.

It was with great interest that I looked forward to a visit at the town of Salonika, where the deposed Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid, is kept in confinement. A king in his court is a hackneyed subject, but a king in prison is interesting.

So far as his immediate surroundings go the ex-Sultan cannot complain. The medieval fashion of throwing royal prisoners into dungeons has gone out of style even in Turkey. Instead of a dungeon the former monarch is provided with an establishment in which many men would be almost willing to be prisoners.

His jail is the villa Allatini, a fine house erected as the country residence of an Italian merchant.

The building is three stories. It is thoroughly modern in all its fittings and appointments. It stands in a thick grove of fine young pine trees, but the large grounds are enclosed by a nine-foot stone wall.

The wall was not built to keep the royal prisoner in, but to keep enemies out.

The Sultan, accustomed all his life to the great privacy of the Yildiz Kiosk, was much worried at living in a country house with no protection other than his guards.

After much insistence the Young Turks consented to erect the wall which the Sultan thought was necessary to prevent attempts on his life. He got the notion when he was Sultan and it is always with him.

At the north and south ends of the estate guard houses have been erected outside the walls, and sentinels are stationed fifty yards apart on both sides. Their duty is to keep out visitors as much as to keep in the prisoner. In fact no one is allowed to come within fifty feet of the wall. The sentries shoot without parley.

It was not until after I reached Salonika that I realized the difficulty of approaching or even getting the slightest glimpse of the ex-Sultan. But I was resolved to do it if possible. So I began to gather information about the general routine at the villa.

I discovered that the household consists at the present time of Abdul Hamid himself, one of his young sons, and eleven wives and consorts, the youngest of these being a Circassian slave girl, twenty-two years old.

She is the youngest member of the harem, and shares Abdul's imprisonment most unwillingly.

He married her just before his deposition, and compelled her to accompany him to Salonika. It has been reported that she has become insane, but one hears much in way of rumors in Salonika.

ABDUL since his imprisonment has grown more whimsical and jealous than ever. He never allows but one woman to walk in the garden at a time. He taxes their patience in every way. Yet at all times I was assured he is cared for and nursed devotedly by the women who share his exile.

When Abdul, I know he won't mind my familiarity, first came to Villa Allatini he used to take frequent walks about the grounds, although of course he was never allowed beyond the walls.

But the grounds held too many terrors for the suspicious and timorous old man. Every noise or rustling in the leaves frightened him, and he conjured an assassin behind every tree. So it did not appeal that I would be likely to get a glimpse of him through the gates or over the walls, much less to speak to him.

In fact when I suggested talking with him I was laughed at, and informed that under no circumstances could I go inside the walls. Aside from the commander of the guards, Razim Bey, only the Sultan's doctor and barber are allowed to enter the grounds. All other servants are as much prisoners as their master.

However, I decided to look the place over and see what could be done. I discovered that the wall on the east side bordered on a field covered with a dense growth of weeds about five feet high. Late one afternoon I went as near the wall as the guards would allow and took a mental inventory of them. I would know any of them again. This was no slight task—as Turkish soldiers are more or less alike. Then I spent several days around an inn much frequented by the soldiers and at last found an opportunity to talk with one who spoke French.

I told him frankly that I wanted to get inside the grounds not as an enemy or spy, but just in the hope of getting a glimpse of the aged Abdul Hamid.

I ASSURED him that nothing I saw would be put to harmful use. He refused to consider the idea. And he scowled and grunted. I drew from my pocket a nestly folded hundred franc note and toyed with it, expressing my profound regret that he misunderstood my motives. I saw a spark in his eye, but he made no sign. Clearly I thought, his rates are higher than regular Turkish tariffs in such matters. I was about to give up my plan to search for another and I started away. He followed me and, asked me again about my reasons for wishing to see the prisoner.

Then we were on a basis of understanding. It was arranged that I should come to his post about midnight, and he would help me over the wall after which I must shift for myself. Furthermore I must take all the responsibility, and avoid being seen by the other guards as he would be compelled to assist in capturing me and perhaps to shoot me if an alarm was given. He stipulated that I must be unarmed.

The prospect was not very alluring, but it was a chance.

I accepted his terms. Once inside I told him I should climb into one of the thick pines near the house, and spend the day there seeing what I could. After dark I would come out over the wall at his post. With a show of splendid Oriental reluctance he extracted another hundred francs from me and we parted.

Late that evening I walked past the Villa Allatini to the weedy field on the east. With a quietness and caution which would have done credit to Daniel Boone I crept through the tall weeds until I was within fifty feet of my man's position. I peered cautiously about. There was no moon, and it was so dark that the other guards were invisible.

As everything seemed quiet I crept up to the big fellow. He said nothing but ran his hands carefully over my clothing and into my shirt at the bosom, evidently to assure himself that I was guiltless of gun or knife. Then, still silent, he gave me a shoulder on the wall.

I tumbled hastily to the ground on the other side, fortunately without a sound louder than my heart beats.

Crouching close to the pines I listened until my cramped position became unbearable. Then I started for the pines. In this grove I breathed easier and felt satisfied that my adventure was thus far a success.

I knew that no guards were inside the walls, and I began to think out a plan for getting out again—after I had seen the royal prisoner. I walked carefully to the edge of the clearing immediately surrounding the villa and selected a thick pine tree as close to the house as I dared to get. I sat at its foot, deciding to wait for dawn before climbing into it. I wanted, more than anything in the world, to smoke, and I occupied myself contrasting the tortures of the martyrs with a real tobacco hunger, unsatisfied.

Then dawn came, as suddenly, it seemed to me, as the rays of an electric light after the switch has been turned. But I had made my tree and was well in among the thick branches, safely, as it turned out, from sight. Most of the shutters of the villa were closed, and the windows not thus protected were covered with heavy curtains. As I was only about two hundred feet from the house I hoped to see anything that occurred on that side of the building.

I waited and waited, and nothing happened.

I was nearly dozing in my somewhat uncomfortable seat, when I was suddenly startled by the sound of a violin playing. The air was from Beethoven's fifth symphony. I recalled the stories I had heard of the Sultan's young son, who alone of all his children, shared his imprisonment. I had been told that this sad and gloomy youth cut off from all friends and companions had mastered the violin.

As I listened to this really capable rendering of Beethoven's music I realized that the player had indeed mastered it. Although a layman, musically, it occurred to me that the one at the bow might become a great virtuoso, or perhaps already was one.

Unfortunately I could not see the youth, if it was he, but a figure passed a window after the music ceased. I made out a gray silk robe and that was all.

About noon as I was eating some of the half loaf of bread which was my only food for the day, a woman in the conventional Turkish costume came around the corner of the house, and strolled about the garden for about twenty minutes. I surmised she might be one of Abdul's consorts out for a brief period of recreation.

After her departure the hours passed slowly. Once I thought I heard a woman's sob from within the house, but the sound was not repeated and I was not sure. The whole establishment might have been a tomb for all the further evidences of life about it.

I had hoped for a sight of the prisoner at one of the five calls to prayer which are included in the daily Turkish routine, but I had not seen him.

ABOUT five o'clock, in the afternoon the shutters of a window on the second floor suddenly swung open. A moment afterward the figure of an old man appeared at the open window, and I realized with a thrill that I was looking at the once powerful monarch, Abdul Hamid II.

His jet black beard, evidently dyed, contrasted strangely with his chalky white face. His curved nose suggested an eagle's bill, but some of the eagle's spirit appeared in his old weak eyes.

As I gazed at the wrinkled parchment face I felt somewhat ashamed of myself for thus prying into the privacy of a mighty man's last bitter days. Especially was this so when I saw him kneel within the open window and facing towards Mecca mutter what must have been a Moslem prayer.

In a few minutes heavy curtains were drawn before the window and Abdul Hamid was gone.

My fit of conscience for my prying was relieved a moment later as the words of a Young Turk leader "Abdul Hamid is dead to the world, and no one will ever see him alive again" came to my mind.

I had seen him. I had penetrated their fancy prison. I had done what I had promised myself I would do. Then I began to wonder whether I should ever be able to get away safe enough to tell about it.

The night came as quickly as the dawn had come, but I waited long after the black curtain had fallen because I wanted to make no mistake.

Finally I slipped quietly to the ground, and although stiff from long sitting on rough pine branches, I succeeded in climbing over the wall and dropping outside near my friendly guard. He stood like a statue while I slipped into the weed patch. In the course of an hour I had regained my hotel.

The dinner I ate and the black speeded coffee drank made my stolid servant eye me with ill concealed admiration. Then I went to bed and the next day duty, pleasure and business called me from Salonika.

I had seen Abdul Hamid, the unseemly, and I was content, for I knew that I should never see a sadder sight than his old yellow wrinkled face as he stood at the window.

His Wife Saw to That.

Farmer Turmut had had a good day at market. His cattle had fetched good prices, and feeling that he bought a nice piece of cloth to have made into a suit of clothes.

But, alas! on his homeward way he lost it, happening which annoyed Mrs. Turmut very much.

Full of the grievance, she told the vicar about it, next day, blaming her husband's carelessness for it.

A week later the vicar met Turmut.

"Good morning, Mr. Turmut," said the good man. "Have you heard anything about your cloth?"

Turmut smiled sadly.

"Yes," he said, solemnly and mournfully, philosophically, "I have—morning, noon, and night."

Fully Explained.

"Look here," stormed the customer, pointing at the tureen. "what is the meaning of that dead fly in the soup?"

"I regret, sir," said the waiter, politely, "I cannot supply you with the desired information. I am only supposed to serve the soup, not explain the ingredients."

"But a dead fly, man," persisted the customer, "dead fly? How did it happen?"

"I am sorry to say, sir," replied the waiter, "I have no idea how the poor creature met its fate. Possibly it had not taken any food for a long time, and fluttering near the soup, found the flavor particularly pleasing, and, eating too heartily, contracted appendicitis or some kindred ailment, which, in the absence of an opportunity for the application of the X-rays to the resultant operation, caused its untimely end."

Mother's Cakes.

A newly-married couple had had a little disagreement about some cakes which the wife had made. The husband complained that these his mother used to produce were far superior. On the next day the girl set before him a plate of hot cakes.

"Now you have achieved something!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "These are exactly like what mother used to make. How did you do it?"

"I will give you the recipe," replied the wife coldly. "I used margarine instead of butter, eggs were old, I put alum in the flour, and added plenty of water to the milk."

Identity Unmistakable.

Dull and gray was the afternoon. Slowly, and reluctantly footsteped, Walter William made his way toward the Sunday-school. If the truth be told in a tell-all way, he was not a lover of Sunday-school, and were it not for parental compulsion, would easily have found some other way of congenially passing the time.

As so often happens when one is down in dumps, another bitter blow was in store for Walter William. He had two beautiful new pennies, one of the Sunday-school, and its brother for the purpose of buying sweets, or some similar delicacy.

Unhappily, he lost one of the bright new coins, and in due time reported the event at the maternal headquarters.

"But, Walter, which of the two pennies did you lose?"

"Back came the reply, like a rifle bullet: "Oh, the Sunday-school one, mother, of course!"

Mrs. Pancake (to a fourth floor lodger)—Anything the matter with your steak, Mr. Hardup?

Hardup—A trifle overtrained, maybe, madame; but really, I never saw a fatter muscle!"

Miss Homeleigh—Perhaps you won't believe it; but a strange man tried to kiss my once.

Miss Cutting—Really? Well, he'd have been a strange man if he'd tried to kiss you twice.

GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU MUST SURELY TRY THIS! IT DOUBLES THE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

All You Need Is a 25 Cent Bottle of "Danderine"—Hair Gets Lustrous, Fluffy and Abundant at Once

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—That's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine" hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks use of Danderine when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

The Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberia moving pictures will be exhibited at the Princess theater on Monday and Tuesday next, November 25 and 26. The pictures were taken by Captain F. E. Klein Schmidt, the famous big game hunter who was commissioned by the Carnegie Museum of Pittsburgh to secure specimens of the fauna of the far north. The pictures are said to be the most marvelous ever taken by motion picture camera. The habits of the polar bear, walrus, seal lion, moose, seal, caribou, mountain sheep and other wild animals of the Arctic regions, as well as those of the birds of the north-land have been faithfully portrayed by the motion camera and when displayed

WOMAN'S HAIR REACHES TO KNEES

A Year Ago Was Threatened With Baldness. Tells How She Made Her Hair Grow

Mrs. Esther Emery, now visiting friends in the city, is the fortunate possessor of a most beautiful hair, which, when loosed from its coils, falls to her knees. Moreover it is of soft, silky and glossy texture and in color a glorious glossy gold. Yet just one year ago she was threatened with baldness. Urged to tell how she had obtained this wonderful growth in so short a time, she said: "Had anyone told me such marvelous results could be accomplished so quickly, positively would not have believed it. Two months ago my hair, which then reached barely to my shoulders, was falling out at an alarming rate and growing very thin, actually exposing the scalp. I had been told that a well known physician had said that by taking ordinary Lavona de Compose and mixing with Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals and applying to the scalp each night with the finger that the hair would grow rapidly. I decided to try it and I had my druggist mix 2 oz. of the Lavona de Compose with 6 oz. of Bay Rum and 1/2 dr. of Menthol Crystals, and started to use it. Mr. how quickly my hair did grow. First the hair stopped falling, the itching ceased and the dandruff disappeared. Then tiny little hairs appeared all over my scalp. These grew and grew as though nothing would ever stop them. They are growing yet and while, of course, I have used the treatment steadily and expect to continue it, at least until my hair reaches the floor. I might have stopped and been perfectly satisfied at the end of three months. I think that any woman can get long, thick, beautiful hair by using this prescription as I have recommended it to several friends and all are delighted with the result. The prescription is very inexpensive and any druggist can fill it. Those who use it should be careful not to get it on the face where hair is not desired."

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

That motion pictures have taken a firm hold on every class of playgoer is fully demonstrated by the remarkable success attained by the Carnegie Alaska-Siberia moving pictures in the leading theaters of the country. These wonderful pictures will be shown at the Princess theater next Monday and Tuesday, November 25 and 26 at the popular prices of 15 cents adults; 10 cents children.

Captain F. E. Klein Schmidt, the well known Arctic big game hunter who photographed the scenes during this expedition to the far north last summer, knows every foot of the polar regions, having spent most of his life among the tribes of the north, including Wrangell Island, and various parts being taken but 18 degrees from the pole.

These pictures come here direct from their record breaking business and run at the Broadway theater in Denver. Professor C. E. Bevens, one of Captain Klein Schmidt's aides on the expedition, lectures at every performance.

With our modern equipment we guarantee these pictures to be clear and not hurt the eyes. Remember the Princess shows only the best pictures.

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

The much talked-of Carnegie Alaska-Siberia expedition pictures will be seen at the Princess theater, two days starting Monday, November 25. The pictures were taken by Captain F. E. Klein Schmidt, the explorer and big game hunter, while on an expedition to the polar regions for the Carnegie Museum of Pittsburgh. Among the many pictures pictured is that of a mother polar fighting to save her cub from its captors. The rearing of the baby bear and the rearing of the mother in the hour of peril is most thrillingly told in the form of motion picture, photography. The audience is given an intimate view of the polar bear, seal, walrus, moose, caribou, mountain sheep and other denizens of the Arctic wilds, while the studies of the Eskimo, at home and in his fearless pursuit and hand to hand battles with the ferocious monsters which provide his subsistence, have proved of great interest to the American public. Adults 15c; children 10c.

SENATOR BURTON, SORE ON POLITICS, TO QUIT FIGHT

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 23.—Theodore Burton, weary of the conflict and criticism that have marked his term in the United States senate, practically decided to decline re-election for reelection in 1914 and to retire from politics.

Such was the announcement made here by Mr. Burton's closest political friend and adviser, following reports from Washington that President Taft has recognized Harry M. Daugherty as referee in Ohio patronage matters and has arranged a meeting with Mr. Daugherty for Saturday at which post office appointments in Ohio will be made up.

"Senator Burton has reached the point where he feels the game is not worth the candle," this friend said. "His honors always have come to him freely. Never until he reached the senate, did he really feel the gait of popular criticism."

DENVER WOMAN GIVEN BIG DAMAGE VERDICT

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Adam Reynolds of Denver was awarded damages of $5,000 against Charles DeMaris, proprietor of the DeMaris hot springs bathing resort near Cody, in federal court here today. Mrs. Reynolds sued for $10,000 for injuries resulting from bathing in a sulphur spring at DeMaris, charging that DeMaris knew the water was dangerous, but gave her no warning. DeMaris introduced witnesses to prove he had warned her against bathing in the sulphur spring. DeMaris will probably appeal.

There was a Frenchman who hated the country as much as did Charles Lamb, but compressed his feelings into few words. This was Charles Mon-salet, who lived on the Quai Voltaire, Paris. "It is," he said, "the place where birds are raw."

WELD AGAIN CAPTURES NEW YORK SHOW PRIZE FOR BEST SUGAR BEETS

AULT, Colo., Nov. 23.—For the second consecutive year Weld county has carried off the first prize at the New York land show for the best sugar beets grown in the United States, the winner this year being S. A. Dickey, a farmer living near here. The beets which won the prize were grown on his place from a field which ran from 18 to 20 tons to the acre. The beets averaged 20 per cent sugar content.

Superintendent C. H. Turner, in charge of the field work of the sugar factory for this district, selected them. The beets averaged three and one-half pounds and are remarkable specimens of the perfect sugar beet, showing what is known as the "German twist" to a marked degree.

Dickey was much surprised when he learned that he had won the Havemeyer cup and said that this particular field had received no greater care than any of the rest. He has grain, beets and alfalfa as well as other crops, and believes in modern ideas in cultivation and farm management.

"Of course, I did not believe that I would win the New York prize," he said. "But it goes to show the fertility of the soil and what this district can do under normal conditions. The fact that the ground possessed considerable moisture at the beginning of the growing season aided by timely rains and good seed to start with, are some of the factors which I think resulted in the generally good stand of beets all over the country. So far as I know all of my neighbors averaged as well as I did in tonnage, although I cannot say how their beets ran in sugar content."

The Havemeyer prize, which consists of a silver cup, valued at $1,000 and $100 in gold, is open to beet growers over the age of twenty and was won last year by a 16-year-old boy, Oral Timothy, son of H. Timothy, of Greeley.

DOUBLE WEDDING IN EL JEBEL TEMPLE NEW YEARS

DENVER, Nov. 23.—There will be more than usual festivity at El Jebel temple New Years eve.

The building will be the scene that night of the first wedding held within its walls and it will be a double wedding. Most of West Colfax will be present to make merry in honor of the nuptial services that will unite in bonds of matrimony Jacob Fellish and Miss Dora Gustafson and Jacob Fellish's sister, Miss Rebecca Fellish, and Albert Hurwitz.

Mr. Fellish is one of the wealthiest business men in the West Colfax district. Both he and his prospective brother-in-law are popular young men, and nothing will be lacking to make their double wedding a notable affair. No expense will be spared to make it elaborate.

The picturesque orthodox Jewish wedding service will be used, and following there will be served a mighty feast fit to set before the finest connoisseur of gourmet fish and other dishes without which no kosher wedding feast is considered complete. The health of the brides and bridegrooms will be drunk in many wines and while the old folks look on the young guests will dance the old year out.

BARNUM IS TO HAVE NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH

DENVER, Nov. 23.—A Catholic church is to be erected in Barnum by the Rev. Father J. J. Gibbons, pastor of St. Ignace, of Colorado. Father Gibbons, who was recently obliged to resign the rectory of the Leadville Catholic church because of the attitude, will take up his residence in the Denver suburb tomorrow and immediately commence upon the plans for the new structure. It is to be one of the handsomest of the smaller churches in the city. Catholic residents in Barnum are now obliged to travel three miles to the nearest church of their faith.

'This Should Keep The Baby Healthy'

When it is ill don't become alarmed
but give this fine laxative.

It is often difficult to tell just what is the matter with a crying, peevish baby. The mother may feel a general rule the mother with find that there is a tendency to constipation, which has brought on a number of nervousness. The little one has no pain, but feels "out of sorts."

The first thing to try is a family remedy containing good, but mild, laxative properties, and many mothers will say that their choice would be Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Thousands of mothers have tried it for such emergencies, among whom may be mentioned Mr. D. C. Head, Mr. Head Drug Co., Ft. Worth, Tex., father of Clarence Carroll Head, and Mr. J. Sutton, 183 Alameda Place, New York, Colo. They and others are glad to say that Syrup Pepsin saved their babies from illness, and many a large doctor bill has been avoided by giving it promptly when the first symptoms of illness were noticed, they prevented a serious ailment.

It is so pleasant-tasting that no child will refuse it, and as it does not grip the child it is safe to take it again. A bottle can be obtained of any drug list for 50 cents or one dollar, the latter being the size bought by families already familiar with its merits.

Syrup Pepsin is for all the family from infancy to old age, and because of its mildness families should prefer it over other remedies. It is absolutely safe, and reliable. You will never again give cathartics, pills, salts or such harsh physics, for they are usually unnecessary, and in the case of children, women and elderly people are a great shock to the system, and hence should be avoided.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin, and you would like to make a personal trial of it, before buying it in the regular way of a drug list, send your address, a postal will be sent to Dr. W. R. Caldwell, 415 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

OFFICIALS 24-HOUR-A-DAY BANKS GET 5 YEARS EACH

SALAZAR EVACUATES PART OF PALOMAS

EL PASO, Nov. 23.—Rebel forces under General Inez Salazar, which, a few days ago, took the port of Palomas on the New Mexico border, late today evacuated the town and moved south, proceeded toward Guzman, on the Mexican-Spanish railway. Although the rebels, Salazar, declared no intention of moving against Casas Grandes, it is believed he will come toward Juarez, the port opposite El Paso.

Before leaving, the rebels sent over the line their wounded and those of the federalists, 31 in number, including Col. Francisco Correll, who was the federal commander of the town. Gen. E. Z. Stecker of Fort Bliss tonight dispatched two army physicians and hospital corps attendants to Columbus, N. M., to care for the wounded Mexicans.

General Salazar sent $300 in currency to Major McDonald, of the Thirteenth cavalry, stationed at Palomas, with a polite explanation that he wished it to be used to defray the expense of the medical attention to both federalists and rebels. Aside from 14 federalists who have crossed the line and are held by United States troops, all of the 100 men of the federal squadron are said to have joined the rebels.

Salazar's prompt action in leaving Palomas may prevent him from encountering a regiment of cavalry which left the city of Chihuahua this morning with order to proceed at once to Juarez. General Tracy Aubert, the federal commander at Juarez, is making all preparations for an attack, and tomorrow will recall small garrisons to the south of the border. There are less than 600 federalists in Juarez with only two machine guns but it is feared that Salazar will form a junction with General Marcello Caravero, who with 400 rebels is operating south of Juarez.

HOCKIN WAS SPY

He formerly was connected with a steel construction firm in Pittsburgh and in 1911 went to Panama as an engineer. He announced to the stand that he testified because he had to, and District Attorney Miller stated it was necessary to take action through the state department to induce Mr. Jewell to appear.

Mr. Jewell testified that in the summer of 1910, before the Los Angeles explosion, Hockin came to his office in Pittsburgh and offered to give information about nitroglycerin hidden in an old cooper shop near Rochester, Pa.

Elope, Married and Groom Is Arrested

ROCKY FORD, Nov. 23.—An elopement and its natural sequel, a wedding, followed by an arrest, and a night in jail for the bridegroom, caused considerable excitement in one of the well-known families here today.

Jewell, the 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Sellers, went to La Junta, in company with Charles Sparks of Matheson, Kan., who was married. She gave her age as 18.

After the marriage, the couple returned to Rocky Ford, where the bride introduced her new husband to her parents and asked for her clothes. The parents objected, and called for a policeman.

The parents finally relented and said if Sparks could show recommendations, there is no objection. They would not further object. Recommendations were sent to friends in Matheson and the bridegroom went to jail and the bride to her parents' home until the next morning.

JURY ACQUITS PRETTY STENOGRAPHER, CHARGED MURDERING SWEETHEART

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Aimee, who was charged with murdering her sweetheart, a stenographer, was acquitted today by a jury. The case had been on for two days.

The stenographer, who was named Charles, was found dead in a rooming house. Mrs. Aimee was charged with the murder.

The jury heard evidence from Mrs. Aimee, who testified that she was not the murderer. The jury also heard from a witness who saw Mrs. Aimee at the scene of the crime.

The jury found Mrs. Aimee not guilty. She was released from jail.

WOMAN IS RECONCILED TO CHAUFFEUR HUSBY

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Aimee, who was charged with murdering her husband, a chauffeur, was acquitted today by a jury. The case had been on for two days.

The chauffeur, who was named Charles, was found dead in a rooming house. Mrs. Aimee was charged with the murder.

The jury heard evidence from Mrs. Aimee, who testified that she was not the murderer. The jury also heard from a witness who saw Mrs. Aimee at the scene of the crime.

The jury found Mrs. Aimee not guilty. She was released from jail.

Planned to Blow-Up Train

He then said a plan was on foot to destroy the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie bridge near Beaver, Pa., under a loaded passenger train. He said if I would go to an old house along the river at Rochester, I would find beneath the floor at three points 52 quarts of nitroglycerin. The next day was spent in Rochester on the same train, agreeing not to speak to each other. I followed Hockin along the river and into the house and pulling up the boards found the nitroglycerin.

I told Hockin our confidence was as to his identity. So the next day I informed General Manager Yohe of the railroad company about the plot and he immediately sent Edward G. Wendt, his engineer, to take away the explosive.

About 10 days after the Los Angeles explosion I went to Detroit to see Hockin.

"You wanted to learn who the dynamite were, did you?"

"Naturally. My agreement I registered at a hotel in Detroit as L. B. Stone, and Hockin called on me."

Urged Hockin to Confess.

We talked about the Times explosion. I told him he ought to make a clean breast of it and tell all he knew. He said the dynamite campaign was being handled by only one or two men. I said that was absurd. He replied he was willing to tell all he knew, but he said he never would testify at any trial and the information would have to come from outside sources. If put on the stand he would declare it was a lie. Then he said James E. McNamara pulled off the Los Angeles Times explosion and was to stop at Kansas City on the way back and cause an explosion there. Hockin related a conversation he said he overheard between J. J. McNamara and President Lynch of the International Typographical union.

He said they met in the lobby of a hotel in Indianapolis and that McNamara asked Lynch, "Lynch, why don't you fellows pull something off on the coast?" and that Lynch made some reply that was inaudible and McNamara then said, "Well, I can give you a man that has got the nerve if you can get the money," and they walked away.

Jewell said, after the Detroit conference, he returned to Pittsburgh and informed the chief of detectives of what he knew. He was referred by the chief to William J. Burns, to whom Jewell at that time (a few weeks after the Times explosion) said he gave a full description of McNamara and Orlie E. McManigal.

Acted as Spy for Burns.

Hockin came to him again at Pittsburgh, the witness said, saying James E. had bought a lot more alarm clocks and explosives were stored at the union headquarters at Indianapolis, and that he (Hockin) saw McNamara leave union headquarters with a suitcase to do the Florida job. Jewell continued:

"I told Hockin I expected soon to leave for Panama, and asked him hereafter in deal directly with Burns. Hockin said if Burns would protect him, and not have him testify, he would deal with him. He would go to Chicago to see Burns about it, which he did. I saw Burns in New York in January, 1911, on my way to Panama."

The government here introduced telegrams purporting to have passed between Hockin and Jewell. Some of these gave accounts of places Hockin visited, and enclosed expense accounts.

The meaning of these letters, as stated by the government, was that Hockin, within the ranks of the union, was acting as a spy for Burns, and was important, while trailing the dynamiters around the country, that Burns did not at once cause the arrests which followed. In April, 1911, or more than four months after Hockin is said to have given Burns a full description of the dynamiters.

CANADIAN EDITOR IS TARRED AND FEATHERED

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 23.—Kellher, editor of the Regina Leader-Post, was tarred and feathered today by a mob. The mob was composed of men who were angry with Kellher for his editorial on the tariff.

Kellher was taken to a rooming house and tarred and feathered. He was then released.

ELECTION JUDGES DRUNK, GUNNISON DEMOCRATS TO CONTEST PROGRESSIVES

GUNNISON, Nov. 23.—The election of County Commissioners William A. Gillespie and E. H. McDowell, Progressives, is contested in a suit filed in the Gunnison county court here today. Elmer Wiley and J. H. Collins, Democrats, who were candidates for the office of commissioner, filed the suit.

Prud is not alleged, but it is charged there was an error in the count and that the election officials in Ohio City were intoxicated and therefore were unable to tabulate correctly the votes cast at the election November 5.

The final figures showed the election of Gillespie by 63 votes, and the election of McDowell by 15 votes. Their Democratic opponents claim that had the count in Ohio City been correct, they, not the Progressive candidates, would have been elected.

Notice was today served on W. Scott Humason, Republican Progressive, shown to have been elected to the state legislature by a majority of 52 votes, that his right to his seat would be contested by his Democratic opponent, J. E. Black, based on similar allegations to those contained in the suit filed against the county commissioners.

REFUSES TO QUASH PENITENTIARY CASES

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Judge Charles A. Wilkins, in the Fremont county district court this afternoon overruled the motion of the five defendants in the state penitentiary alleged graft cases, who asked to have quashed the information charging conspiracy on the ground of insufficiency of allegation. The trial of the five defendants jointly will begin next Monday morning, a jury having been secured today.

The court held that "inasmuch as the information charging conspiracy was examined by the supreme court at the time it passed a motion to quash the charges, it is to be presumed that the supreme court considered the allegations sufficient."

WOMAN SHOT AT REND DIES OF HER INJURIES

RENO, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Estelle W. Baggett, who was shot yesterday by Harry S. Weems at a nearby bathing resort, died late tonight. Her husband is Lee Baggett, a lace manufacturer of New York. She came originally from Taylorville, Ill.

At the coroner's inquest over the body of Mrs. Weems, who shot herself after shooting Mrs. Baggett, the adverse evidence testified that the side of his head showed signs of hardening, indicating either insanity or its near approach.

COLDS DO NOT CAUSE CATARRH

ALL BLOOD TONICS

A cold will usually aggravate the symptoms of Catarrh, just as it may increase the pains of Rheumatism. But the cold has no more to do with the real cause of the one than with the other. Bad blood is the underlying cause for Catarrh; the circulation is infected with impurities which are deposited into the mucous membranes causing inflammation and irritation, followed by excessive secretion of the nose and throat, roaring sounds in the ears, neuralgia, inflamed eyes, etc. Being a deep-seated blood trouble, Catarrh must be treated constitutionally, for it is beyond the reach of local treatment. The blood must be purified—the cause removed before a cure can be effected. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter and at the same time building up the system by its fine tonic effects. In other words S. S. S. cures the trouble by supplying the mucous membranes with healthy, life-giving blood instead of saturating them with catarrhal impurities. Special book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write and request same. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores.

Centennial Holds Terrors to 2 to 2 Tie in Terrific Game

Locals Kept Scoreless Until Last Quarter; Fumbles Cost Brown the State Championship

Outplayed and outfought for three periods of the most exciting football ever seen on Washburn field in the inter-scholastic class, the Terrors suddenly struck their stride in the fourth quarter, ploughed through the Centennial line up the field, and sent Fowler through for a touchdown with just five minutes to play. With the score 7 to 6 against them, the Brown and White supporters held their breath while the "human pepperbox" kicked out to Shockley and later booted the ball squarely between the goal posts, tying the score and saving the Terrors from a disgraceful defeat. In the third quarter Centennial made a desperate attempt to score again and with the ball on the 40-yard line, Talbot attempted goal from placement. The leather flew true but just slipped under the bar. A slight breeze from the south probably saved the Terrors from a 14 to 7 defeat.

The Terrors found the lighter-colored sweatered opponents the fastest and most puzzling opponents of the year, and due to overconfidence and fumbling in the Terrors' part, the state interscholastic championship will never be decided for 1912. An attempt was made to arrange a game to play off the tie on Thanksgiving but negotiations failed.

Touchdown Protested.

Last night Centennial claimed a victory, arguing that they were deprived of a touchdown made by Talbot in the second quarter when Referee Stutsman penalized the Red for offensive play, disallowing the plunge through the line for six yards. The Terrors on the other hand without claiming a victory, for they have no grounds for such a contention, suffered the loss of a touchdown by Shockley in the same manner, being booted back after the plunging Terrors' half back, slipped through the holders for a 40-yard run.

Although outfought more than 16 pounds to the man, the Centennial team showed a fierceness in tackling, a stubbornness on defense and a brilliancy in forward pass and trick play that swept the Terrors off their feet in the first half of the game. A whirling snipe play, with five-man power interference that clung together despite the attacks of the locals, enabled the visitors to gain much of their ground, while two cleverly executed forward passes, Talbot to Hamlin, brought the stands to their feet. Centennial to see a victory and the locals expecting defeat.

Lacked the Punch.

The Terrors simply lacked the punch both offensive and defensive. Too costly fumbles by Shockley in the first period lost them the chances for an early score, and throughout the half the Brown tackled in a rather sickly fashion compared with what they are capable of. It was the Centennial bulldog spirit that kept the Red team plugging away in the first half for the touchdown that was well earned and for several other near-misses. It was undoubtedly the Centennial half-back, Guided by the stinging remarks of the coaches, the Terrors came back with a fighting spirit in the second half and for a time the tackling and play blocking seemed to overshadow the brilliant runs of the Blue backs—but offensive play failed, owing to weak interference and a gritty Pueblo line, and Fowler was forced to punt.

The only real form that the Brown is capable of was displayed in the last quarter when brilliant runs by Davis and Shockley, and crushing line plunges by Taylor moved the ball up to the goal line. With but a yard to go it took the Terrors three downs to put the ball across and then it was only an inch beyond the line mark. The ball was close to the sidelines and upon the kickoff depended a tie that would prevent the Brown and White from the first defeat this year. Fowler was cool and plunked the leather into Shockley's arms. Blondy later shot the goal.

Hardest Game Yet.

It was the hardest fought game played on Washburn field this year and one of the fiercest high school games in history. Both teams used much straight football and due to the fierce defense four downs were required on many occasions to gain the distance, both teams being forced to kicked an easy goal. All this happened in six minutes.

Talbot kicked off to Lendrum who was downed almost in his tracks. Then followed a line smashing duel, neither team being able to make the necessary 10 yards and being forced to punt often. The quarter ended with Centennial holding the ball on their 30-yard line.

Second Quarter.

Zeiger punted to Shockley and Taylor made first down on the first play through center. Fowler essayed a long forward pass that fell untouched and the ball went over to Centennial on downs. The Red Dogs were unable to gain by line plunging and punted to Fowler who returned 30 yards. Taylor again made first down and after working the oval up to the 40-yard line, Fowler tried a drop kick that flew low. Centennial offense failed again and Hamlin's dynamite too hoisted the leather to Fowler who took the ball on a pretty sprint. The Terrors were penalized 15 yards for holding and the Brown punted. A forward pass to Hamlin netted 30 yards and the Red captain crossed the line but Referee Stutsman brought the players back to suffer a penalty for offside play. On the fourth down, Talbot booted the Terrors with a fake placement kick that turned out to be a forward pass to Hamlin, who carried the ball to the five-yard line. The whistle saved the Terrors from another touchdown.

Third Quarter.

The third period developed no startling new plays and the old fashioned line plunging game with a punt on its tail was used back and forth for some time. The Terrors started the ground gaining game by making one first down on the next last by an inch. Centennial fumbled on the next play and then the Terrors followed suit.

The quarter ended after an exchange of punts.

Fourth Quarter.

Davis replaced Nifong strengthening the Terrors and with the goal line 50 yards distant, Captain Taylor led his braves up the field by line smashes en masse. Davis and Shockley riding in the ground gaining process. The last 10 yards seemed gained almost by inches, the ball being placed on the one-yard line. A smush at the center of the line filled, there was hurried conference of the Terror backfield and with the time growing short, Centennial expected some other sort of a play. A banking of signals and in a minute a pile of players. After the last Centennial man had been pried off, Fowler was found with the ball under his arm, one inch over the goal line.

The kick-out and goal are now historic in the annals of C. S. H. S. and the score was tied.

Centennial made a desperate attempt to score in the last five minutes of play but the Terror defense stiffened and held. Terror fumbles and good recoveries by Centennial placed the ball on the Brown 40-yard line where Talbot made an unsuccessful attempt at a goal, the ball barely missing the cross bar.

After this intermission the locals seemed to comparatively find their form, and sent line plunges up the field for about 20 yards but Centennial braved, and a forward pass failed, giving the visitors the ball. The game ended after Hamlin had punted to Fowler, the local quarter being downed in his tracks.

Hamlin was injured in the last play of the game, the first time he had to have time taken out during the season.

PURDUE OUTCLASSES INDIANA; SCORE 34 TO 7

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 23.—Indiana's hopes of winning the annual game from Purdue here today were not realized for after the close of the first period the visitors had not a chance and were completely outclassed by the husky local team. It was Purdue's game practically all the way through. The final score was Purdue 34; Indiana, 7.

Harvard Wins in Big Cross Country

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 23.—A Cornell relinquished the intercollegiate cross-country cup today to Harvard after winning it 12 times out of the last 14, although Captain John Paul Jones, of the Cornell team was the first man to cross the tape. Jones won by 150 yards in 32:29 1/2. He has taken individual honors for the last three years. Harvard's score was 32 points. Cornell was second with 48; Dartmouth third with 87 and the other colleges as follows: Brown, 117; Pennsylvania, 154; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 156; Syracuse, 174; Princeton, 199; Yale, 269; College of the City of New York, 319.

THURSDAY 10 END FOOTBALL IN THIS CITY

After a season filled with ups and downs, joys and glooms, good weather, but no bad weather, the gridiron sport will make its final bow to the local public Thanksgiving afternoon, at Washburn field, when the Tigers play Denver university. This match is the only remaining game of the conference schedule and owing to the varied fortunes of the two teams, considerable interest is being shown over the outcome. Denver has not met the Tigers on the local field for five years, the play generally being staged in the capital city owing to the crowds.

Denver started out with a slump, and is not playing its best game. The Tigers played opposite. They started out like championship contenders and then slumped. The Tigers will be up against a weighty team, but a slow one, and it will take all the football the locals know to win. The D. U. game has always been one of the hardest fought of the conference season.

With the Terrors—those championship-aspiring Brown and White players—things are different. They have gone through the entire season without a defeat by a high school, although they came awfully close yesterday. Arrangements are now under way for a Thanksgiving game with the Lamar team at the latter city.

The locals came out of the Centennial melee yesterday, to avoid physical trim, although there are several limps in the crowd. Fowler and Davis both have bruised ankles, but will get around all right by Thursday.

HARVARD CRUSHES YALE'S HOPES BY 20 TO 0 SCORE

Flynn a Disappointment When He Fumbles Punts; Brickley Star of Game

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 23.—The Crimson triumphed over the Blue on Yale field today when Harvard's eleven, taking advantage of Yale's backfield errors, made two touchdowns and two field goals, and rolled up a score of 20 to 0 over their ancient football rivals. The victory carries the football championship of the east to Cambridge.

Harvard scored a touchdown and a field goal in both the first and third periods. The first score came when Storer recovered the ball which Wheeler, the Yale quarter back, dropped on being tackled, and sprinted 25 yards to the goal line. Harvard kicked the goal. A minute later another Yale muff gave Brickley his chance to kick the first field goal.

Yale's Fumbles Costly.

A fumble by Flynn at the opening of the third period gave the ball to Harvard, and in the scrimmage Brickley dashed 18 yards for the second touchdown. This same player caught a Yale forward pass a minute later and ran 42 yards, and after a few plays, booted the ball over the cross bar for the second field goal.

Yale was not a factor in the game except negatively until the final period. Then the Crimson line began to yield to the battering and the Blue leaped players, reinforced by substitutes, drove the ball by line plunges and a wing shift formation, to witful eight yards of Harvard's goal. There Yale became too confident of its rushing ability and lost the ball on downs. A few minutes later Pumphrey standing on Harvard's 35-yard line, was prepared to attempt a field goal when the officials' whistle ended the game.

After finding the Yale backfield a most unstable proposition in handling punts, Harvard made very little effort to test the strength of the Blue line.

Yale Sadly Outplayed.

What the score might have been had not Romeister and Ketcham shown such speedy work in nailing Harvard backs and breaking up the Crimson offense, was a matter for speculation tonight. The entire Yale defense seemed to rest on these two players, and when Romeister was taken out in the second period, the Crimson offense again became very aggressive. He was sent in again in the third period, to stem the Crimson tide but was unequal to the task. On the other hand the playing of Flynn and Wheeler was a keen disappointment to the Blue grandstands. Every time Pelton sent one of his punts skyrocketing into the air, a shiver went through the Yale stands when they saw either of these two players start to catch the pigskin. After several brilliant runs around the Harvard ends, for gains which seemed long, but proved short, Flynn was led from the field in tears to give way to a fresher man.

The Cambridge team as a whole was considered the best ever developed at Harvard. Its changing qualities were powerful and its speed unusually fast.

Brickley Still Shines.

As in all this season's games, the brilliancy of Brickley's running and goal kicking outshone the individual play of his team mates.

Harvard's initial touchdown was the first the Crimson has scored against Yale since 1901 and was the first score on the Yale eleven this season. The Crimson winning was the greatest made in games between the two colleges since Yale won 23 to 0 in 1902 and the Blue being score of zero marks the sixteenth consecutive year in which the losing team has not scored.

Mines Defeat Boulder and Win Championship

Roll Up 24-3 Score on Varsity and Upset State Tradition

BOULDER, Nov. 23.—The Colorado School of Mines ball eleven capped the climax of a season's steady development by defeating the University of Colorado here today, 24-3. Reeking the Rocky mountain conference championship the number of games won and lost, this victory ties Mines Utah for first place.

The defeat of Colorado upset general expectations, the losers being prohibitive favorites. Line plunging was the order of play for both teams, Colorado resorting to the forward pass and incidentally making good gains only in the last few minutes of play. The Mines' points were made the result of three touchdowns and a field goal.

Mines Play Steady Game.

Mines came up strong in the last half, keeping the ball almost constantly in Colorado territory. By repeated plunges through guard and tackles, they curled the ball close to their opponents' goal. Harper went through left guard for a touchdown and then kicked goal. A few minutes later Mines blocked a kick and took possession of the ball on Colorado's six-yard line, whence Harper went through line guard again for a touchdown. He kicked goal.

In the fourth quarter McGuire intercepted a forward pass and ran 50 yards to Colorado's 25-yard line, from where Harper sent a drop kick between the goal posts. In the minute of play McGuire scooped ball fumbled by Colorado and 25 yards to another touchdown. For lack of goal.

The Mines team will leave next for California, where they will Pomona. An effort will be made to get a game with Occidental also.

Kansas Surprises Supporters by Its Defeat of Missouri

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 23.—Missouri's football team lost to Kansas, 12 to 8, here today, in a game that was hard fought all the way. Speedy shift plays by the Kansas baffled their opponents in the early stages of the game. The Kansas team took the lead by making the only touchdown of the contest, in the second quarter, and was able to hold it, despite a fierce rally by the Missourians in the second half.

MONTANA DEFEATS GONZAGA

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 23.—The University of Montana defeated Gonzaga, 16 to 7, today, in a game in which there was little open football and few trick plays. The ball was in Gonzaga territory much of the time, and only McKevitt's consistent punting kept down the score.

WOLGAST-RITCHIE MATCH TO BE BEST FEAS FOR THE FANS

By W. W. NAUGHTON
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—Turkey cranberry sauce is the national dish at Thanksgiving time, but here the far west like Queensberry as an added condiment. It is, of course, how tastes become used, but it is substantial testimony to the force of habit.

retrospective glance will show for years and years every good and true of this favored burg has in a position to take in a glove test, generally of championship type, before turning his thoughts to meats, liver, wings and the like. This year it looked for a while as though the Thanksgiving celebration would be incomplete. Promoter Coffroth had an option on Lightweight champion Wolgast's services but he did not find a suitable opponent. A sounds strange in view of the fact that all the 133-pound men in Christendom are clamoring all the year round for a crack at Wolgast, but it is true nonetheless.

K. O. Brown Not Anxious.
Knockout Brown, who issued 57 different kinds of challenges to Wolgast any ordinary month, declined because of some more pressing engagements and so did all the others who considered fit mettle for the Michigan wildcat.

But here is the funny part of it. All time Coffroth was dickering with knockout Brown and the rest of them, had one particular youth in mind the boxer best calculated to draw a crowd, with Wolgast. This was little Ritchie, a San Francisco pro, who gave Wolgast a hard time here once in four rounds and who saved Joe Mandot in New Orleans. Coffroth was debarred from talking iness with Ritchie because Ritchie's manager and Coffroth are the principals in a fight which dates back to the Bat-Johnson days and which was recently owing to a personal encounter between the men.

Why Nolan is the manager's name, said repeatedly: "I will not have anything to do with Coffroth." He looked the fact that the public did care a continental of the never, er, never had anything to do with Coffroth. What the fight fans wanted now was whether Ritchie was going to have anything to do with Wolgast.

Ritchie Anxious.
Coffroth sawed wood and little while as for poor Ritchie, plight was pitiable. He was just in every fiber to get a crack at champion, but through feelings of pity to his manager, was constrained to do aloof.

When came the Mandot-Wolgast fight at New Orleans and then Coffroth made an announcement. He said, owing to his inability to secure a suitable opponent for Wolgast he had abandoned his plans for having a Thanksgiving glove feast.

When there was a genuine flurry in pugilistic glove circles. Manager in went hot foot to Los Angeles to Tom Jones and Ritchie after a hours of deep cogitation sought Coffroth and wanted to know if he was not a chance of having the Thanksgiving date restored to the calendar.

Coffroth Pretty Foxy.
Coffroth, why old fox that he is, said would see what could be done. And saw. And in less than 24 hours Jones, Coffroth and Ritchie were tied together drawing up and signing articles for a Thanksgiving fight. A Nolan remained in Los Angeles is not to clog the wheels of progress.

It goes to show that there is more to light promoting game than putting up forfeits and paying out purses. It goes to show that when the comes for making a detour or extending a flank movement this fellow Roth knows his field as well as the of them.

They think very well of the Ritchie-Wolgast match here. The thing that as it of particular interest to sports is the fact that Ritchie is a San Francisco boy. He developed in a four-round school and was so thought of that when a light-fight was wanted in a hurry to take Wolgast's place against Freddie Welsh last Thanksgiving. Ritchie was telegraphed for. He went to Los Angeles and although he had not had a single day's training did so well against the Britisher that Welsh's friends, were scurrying around looking for a chance to hedge their money after one fierce round.

Men Met Before.
It was Ritchie who faced Wolgast in a four-round bout in San Francisco when Ad thought himself sufficiently recovered from his operation to take up his life work again. Now no one cares to lay much stress on what happened on that occasion for the reason that Wolgast was not himself by any means.

He nearly collapsed once when he bumped into Ritchie's lowered shoulder in a mixup and from the way Ad acted the suspicion arose right there that his fighting days were about over. But before the collision occurred Ritchie had sent Wolgast staggering with a well placed right on the jaw and had done so well generally that the bout has always been looked upon as a close thing for the champion.

Is Little too Heavy.
One thing which Ritchie's friends question his ability to do is making 133 pounds with comfort. Ritchie has been at pains to correct the impressions they have formed. He says that while in Lake county recently he brought himself down to within a pound and a half of the championship notch, and this without special effort.

"I wanted to see if I was really getting bigger," said Willie. "I would be the last man in the world, to give out anything that would deceive or mislead those who take an interest in me and I have no hesitation in saying that I can make 133 pounds ringside without weakening myself in the least." All things considered, it looks as though the championship match at Daly City next Thursday will be worth witnessing.

Chicago Is Victor Over Minnesota
CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Second-place honors in the "Big Nine" football championship race belongs to University of Chicago.

In one of the fiercest and most desperately fought games on Marshall field in years, Chicago won the honors by defeating the University of Minnesota today, 7 to 0. Minnesota never had a chance to score. Chicago outplayed and outkicked its foe in every period.

Victory for Chicago came in the third period, after the teams had struggled through two quarters with honors even.

Straight football won for Chicago. Neither team attempted more than a few trick plays. When forward passes were attempted, the ball usually went wide of its mark. Norgren and Gray played a brilliant game for Chicago, while McAlmon and Berman were the most consistent ground gainers for Minnesota.

TILLMAN AND MACK WILL SCRAP HERE ON FRI., DEC. 6

BILLY TILLMAN, SPRINGS WELTERWEIGHT.
Who will start on a winter's boxing campaign December 6 when he meets Jimmy Mack in an eight-round go. These popular local fistfight men have been trying to get together for the last four years, and will put up a great scrap when they clash here.

After negotiating for four years to get together in the squared circle, Billy Tillman and Jimmy Mack, two popular local welter weights yesterday signed articles to meet December 6 at Moyer's athletic academy for an eight-round battle. The men will weigh 142 at the ringside.

Several years ago the two boxers had everything nearly arranged to pull off a scrap but there was a hitch and the affair was cancelled. Many fight fans are greatly interested in the articles of both men and the match should be the best card seen here for some time. Tillman starts training for the fight tomorrow.

NEBRASKA COMES BACK BADGERS DEFEAT IOWA

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 23.—It was a different team that faced Oklahoma University here today from that which met Kansas last week. This Cornhuskers battled like gladiators, and only the superior work of the Oklahoma eleven in the use of the forward pass enabled it to get within striking distance of the Nebraska goal. The Scarlets and Cream team was able to tear through the Oklahoma forwards at will, and the star work of the Nebraska backs were responsible for the 13-to-9 defeat which Nebraska administered to the Oklahomaans.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize A Million a Year

This year's sales on Goodyear tires will exceed a million casings. The present average is 100,000 automobile tires a month. That breaks all the world's records. Yet the demand has compelled us to increase our capacity to 8,000 tires a day. All because these tires—after 13 years—represent the best word in tire making.

Our patent type—the No-Rim-Cut tire—ends forever all puncturing troubles. And our 10% oversize, under average conditions, adds 25% to the tire mileage.

Since the vogue of odometers since 1909 our sales have multiplied 12 times over. Because motorists know now—by measured mileage what the Goodyear economy means.

Your own odometer will sell you these tires when you once let it make comparisons. Write us for the Goodyear Tire Book. Come and see the tires.

The prospects deal got still angrier when the Canadian Indians hopped across the border and scalped the Canadians. Football players could get in shape by taking part in the rush for tickets for their big games.

Jack Johnson is finding that American laws for the protection of decency have a different kind of punch from Jim Jeffries.

Big Ed Walsh is a living refutation of the idea that the ball player has a clutch. To cash in his wage allowance, the Adonis twister had to get into 61 games for the White Sox last season.

The bull money is better off than most of the defeated presidential aspirants. He has a job to go back to his pay envelope docket for the time he was away from the Outlook copy desk seeking a berth in Washington.

Tennessee woman collector has 182 pitchers of all sizes and shapes. She must have been picking up the discarded left in the south by big league managers at the conclusion of the spring training season.

For the concert of Europe's powers to deprive the allies of the fruits of their victory over the Turk would be about equivalent to the Boston Nationals and the New York Americans getting a split of the world's series wagers.

It's all a matter of habit. Some ball players chase the duck during the winter months.

Northwestern Wins From Illinois, 6-0

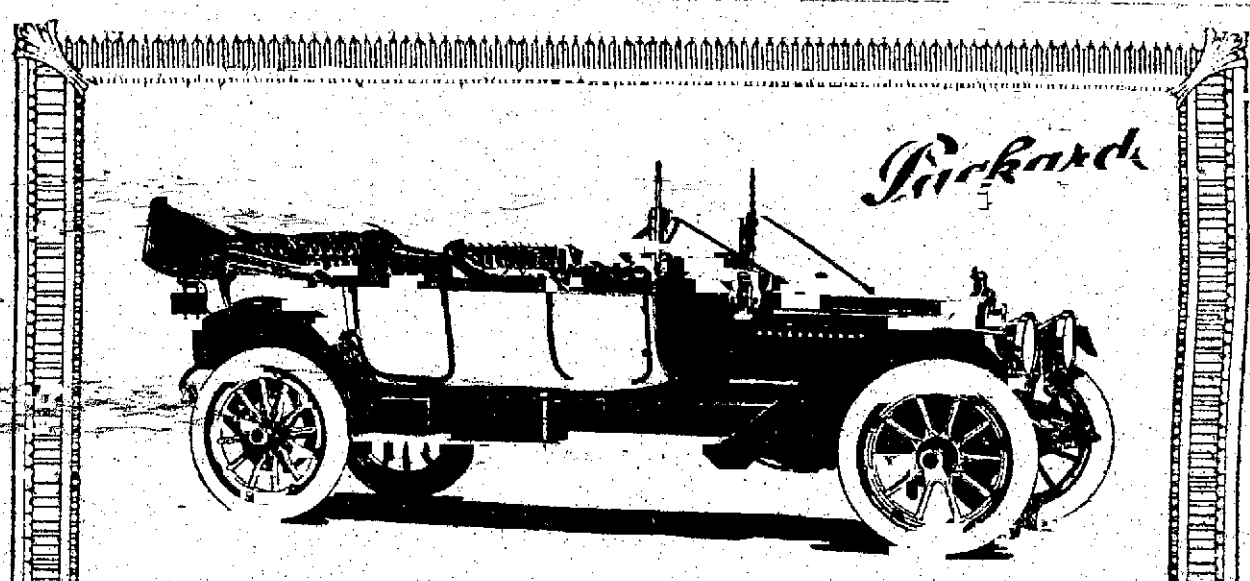

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 23.—Northwestern University defeated Illinois today in the final game of the season here, 6 to 0. Northwestern scored twice in the first half and twice in the second half.

NAVY EASY VICTOR OVER NEW YORK UNIVERSITY

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 23.—Navy beat New York University here this afternoon and at the same time sent the visitors home at a time undergoing the Blue and Gold goal lines.

AMES WINS FROM DRAKE

DES MOINES, Nov. 23.—Fighting desperately late, outplayed, the Drake football team went down before Ames here today, 23 to 3.
